Many people who leave Salem for the dirt back. They find while it is not the fastest place in the world it is not the slowest, and few places in the world are more substantial and satisfactory in the long run for wearing qualities. W. H. ...

to let the sunshine of progress in on the city of Portland. As Garfield said, the stars in their courses are fighting for Salem. The Capital City of Oregon has ten times the resources of any other city on the coast. With the push, vim, snap and energy of Spokane or Seattle we would go like a rocket and would never stop. But this is an older town than either of those and suffers a little from being aged.

Erect no more wooden buildings on Willamette campus.

J. W. Pratt hands us the champion potato so far, weighing four and a quarter pounds. It is a native Oregon Burbank. There was an old man potato weighing about two pounds, and then another son of a potato growing out of that nearly as big. Old man Stud and his boy together were enough to feed a small family, or make potato salad for a whole church social. Who can beat it?

The Salem street paving plant stands on historical ground. It was the site of the Du Reil sawmill, the first steam sawmill in the city, erected on the bank of south Mill creek. It was washed away by the high water of 1862, but some of the foundation stones are still there. The paving plant is also on the site of the natural amphitheatre that overlooked the site of the gallows where Beals and Baker were executed by public hanging, and witnessed by the whole countryside. It is a long hark from those days to the present, and men are old and gray who were young fellows in school then. But the world do move.

The value of advertising is shown by an innocent item about a Journal subscriber who has an overly bright young lady dog. She does not read The Journal, but she does lie in wait for it and deliver it to the owner of the dog, who formerly had an offer of ten dollars for the animal, and now holds her at fifty. The difference in price is due to the advertising.

The Western Union Telegraph Co. seems to be seeing how little business it can do at Salem. A press dispatch received at 2:07 was delivered at The Journal office at 2:43, two blocks away. A dispatch filed on one of its messenger calls was obtained by fast messenger service about an hour later. The Oregon compulsory education law that forbids hiring boys who ought to be in school has almost put the Western Union out of business. If ever there was a case where the government would be justified in taking over a public utility service it is in the case of the telegraphs. It could not be slower than the mails but even that would be an improvement on some of the present service. The manager at Salem recently resigned and went to farming. What grudge the Pacific coast superintendent has against this city not to be willing to allow enough office help is a mystery.

A dispatch from Milton, Oregon, say an electric car on the Walla Walla interurban line struck a cow, and was derailed. With that wisdom and careful thoughtfulness and attention to detail peculiar to those who gather news for transmission, this one added to the news the state-

THIS IS SAID TO HELP MANY

Should Mix This Simple, Helpful Recipe At Home and Try It, Anyway

Get from any prescription pharmacy the following:
Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces.
Shake well in a bottle and take a teaspoonful dose after each meal and at bedtime.

The above is considered by an eminent authority as the finest prescription ever written to relieve Backache, Kidney Trouble, Weak Bladder and all forms of Urinary difficulties. This mixture acts promptly on the eliminative tissues of the Kidneys, enabling them to filter and strain the uric acid and other waste matter from the blood which causes Rheumatism.

Some persons who suffer with the afflictions may not feel inclined to place much confidence in this simple mixture, yet those who have tried it say the results are simply surprising, the relief being effected without the slightest injury to the stomach or other organs.

Mix some and give it a trial. It certainly comes highly recommended. It is the prescription of an eminent authority, whose entire reputation, it is said, was established by it.

ment that the cow was in front of the car when struck.

If the street cars had some sign by which they could be identified after dark, it would prove a great convenience to the patrons of the cars.

The trouble with President Campbell, of the U. of O., is that he imagines he has been employed to run the state, instead of the University.

If the fog had a little sweetening in it, it would make pretty good soda fountain booze.

The speakers at the Portland Commercial Club dinner, declared that the people of Oregon did not know what they wanted, and the club therefore passed a resolution that the U. of O. appropriation bill should be passed. Now, that the benighted farmer and ignorant other people have had their duty pointed out to them, let them walk up to the polls, and vote as they are told.

Flour

Now is the time to buy your winter's supply of flour. Flour is advancing in price very rapidly. Place your order today at the old price.

Carrots

We have some fine carrots that we are making a very low price on. Try a few sacks, they are the cheapest feed on the market today.

Holland Bulbs

Part of our fall bulbs are in. Now is the time to plant them for early blooms. Our prices are very low for good bulbs.

WANTS MORE LIGHT

The Horse Editor Appeals to Portland's After Dinner Push, for Information

The initiative and referendum came up for discussion, or rather condemnation, at Portland recently, the time being Tuesday night, the occasion, the Commercial Club's first monthly dinner, and the speakers being provided for the especial purpose of jumping onto the "initiative and referendum," individually and collectively.

The horse editor has read with considerable amusement, not unmixed with some information, the account of the affair, as heralded to the world through the columns of the Oregonian. Now, the horse editor is one of the commonest kind of common people. He does not boast of a college education. He has not the erudition of a Harvey Scott, the profound mass of generally useless knowledge with which the average college president's think tank is commonly filled, or the brilliant array of glittering generalities with which Hon. W. D. Fenton can polish up any old subject till it coruscates like an over-ripe mackerel in the bright effulgence of the harvest moon. Still, with the plain, common, everyday thinker with which a chary nature provided him, he has given the speeches of the gentlemen of the Commercial Club some thought, and arrived at the conclusion that, as the speakers admitted they didn't know anything about what they were voting for when they assisted in adopting the initiative and referendum, and as it is evident that they have learned nothing since, the "common people" are up against it. There isn't any one to teach them, either. Fenton can't; President Campbell doesn't know the difference between the law and the U. of O. appropriation bill; U'Ren has forgotten, and Scott hasn't decided yet which side he is on.

The horse editor feels hurt. He wants to vote on this proposition, and he wants to vote right; but how can he do it if the great men of the state shove their feet under the Commercial Club's mahogany, and reward the hosts for furnishing the stuffing by dealing in metaphysical dissertations on "The seeming of the thing unknown," or "Who knows what is going on under a farmer's hat?"

Fenton says "The initiative and referendum has done no serious harm, because the people are nearly always right." That was real nice of him, but how are the people going to remain right if the Portland bunch pulls down the blinds over their thinkographs, and don't let the bright lights of their intellects cast a few bright flashes into the dark and rayless gloom of our innocent ignorance? True, the leading intellects of the village down the creek have asserted that they believe the University of Oregon appropriation ought to pass, but this is not convincing. The common, everyday voter wants a reason. How are we to know whether the great men really meant what they said. We realize that they were guests, invited to attend the wake of the referendum, and their expressions may have only been those trifles of politeness common on such occasions. Who knows but that, when the champagne ceases to bubble and the hilarity to flow, they will say "they never said it."

Then, again, when the initiative and referendum was to be voted upon, did not some of the same born molders of public sentiment send pamphlets broadcast over the fair state, and scatter them through the highways and byways, until the sylvan paths looked like the tail end of

to the legal voters of the City of Salem, Oregon:

You are hereby notified that the registration books for the City of Salem, Oregon, are now open, and that it is the duty of all electors of said city to register before the holding of the primary election in said city on November 2, 1907, and that said registration books will be open at the office of the City Recorder in the City Hall in said city, during office hours, for the purpose of registering electors, until 6 o'clock p. m. of Thursday, October 31, 1907.

a Chinese funeral? And did not these same pamphlets say "Vote for the initiative and referendum?" You verily; and yet these same leaders now tell us they didn't know what they were talking about. In the language of the immortal Tom Ochiltree: "Where are we at?"

The horse editor has no advice to give, and, unfortunately, he has none to follow. Along with the balance of the uninformed sons of toil, he goes groping blindly; vainly hoping for light, and realizing that in his blindness he is bound for the ditch since every individual of the Commercial Club push is troubled with intellectual strabismus and mental ophthalmia.

The voters should invoke the initiative to have a public mentor appointed for themselves, but then the Portland intellect would want to select him, so what's the use?
