CORRESPONDENCE COURSE.

University of Oregon Doing Good Work in This Line.

University of Oregon, Eugene, Oct. 19.—The demand throughout the state for the correspondence work now being offered by the University of Oregon is greatly surpassing the expectations of its most sanguine supporters. In a number of towns the teachers are forming clubs and carrying on work under the direction of the university instructors. The interest is not confined to teachers, however, for many young men and women who have found it impossible to attend colleges are taking the work. To begin with, only a small number of courses are being offered, such as English Classics and Shakespeare, English history, pedagogy, algebra, etc., but others will be added from time to time.

MISSIONS A MAN'S WORK

Missions are a work for men. Expressed in the terms most common among the "business" element of the country, the missionary "proposition" as it exists today is one that calls for the best powers of the ripest masculine judgment. This is the conclusion of William T. Ellis, the Philadelphia journalist, whose recent tour of the missionary world of the east was from time to time reported in the Literary Digest. Reviewing the impressions derived from this investigation, Mr. Ellis declares (in the Chicago Interior) that he is "more than ever a believer in foreign missions, although my understanding of the enterprise has radically altered." Without depreciating the work hitherto contributed by women, he avers that "this is no work for the exclusive interest of women and children"; the time has come for "men to come to their own." We read:

"Here is a field for the exercise of the largest abilities possessed by the ablest men of Christendom, and the nature of the situation at present is that if the men of the churches do not enter into their proper inheritance, the biggest task to which they could lay their hands will languish and they themselves will miss the opportunity of ages.

"Up to the present, foreign mission work has been a mere reconnaissance in force, and not a war. One of the hurtful delusions of the home churches concerning foreign missions (a delusion sometimes fostered by ill-balanced reports from the field) is that the whole heathen world is on the verge of conversion to Christianity. One of the commonest figures of missionary oratory represents the nations as crowding into the church. Now, the unwelcome fact is that heathendom as a whole has scarcely been budged by missions. Great as have been the missionary triumphs in spots, the whole mass has hardly been touched by the Christian teachings. Even enlightened Japan, which many persons believe to have become almost Christianized, is still rankly heathen, except for the small percentage of the population which only the mind of faith can invest with conquering power.

"Now, this big task calls for large measure. The brains which have created the vast commercial enterprises of the twentieth century must attack this work with equal adequacy. This undertaking is too great to be maintained on a basis of pretty, pathetic or heroic stories, adapted to arouse the interest and sympathy of women and children. Unless it be established on a firm basis of principle and purpose, by men who have the vision and courage and resourcefulness to plan tremendously and persist that the conditions imperatively demand can not be successfully accomplished.

"Only men can give the missions the supervision that they require. As there is a phenomenal drawing together of denominational bodies on the mission fields, with a breaking down of lines of division that must gladden the heart of every one who is distressed by any kind of wasted force and hurtful friction, so there is bound to come in the home lands a co-ordination of missionary agencies that will far exceed the friendly co-operation already existing.

"At present the real activity is too far separated from authority and responsibility; the boards are too remote from the fields. Different talents must be utilized for different work; a more discriminating employment of missionary workers, and a more diverse, is suggested by an examination of the work. Most missionaries are qualified for their positions; some are not. A careful winnowing process will be maintained by closer, more businesslike oversight.

"The missionary body as a whole is too worthy to be made to suffer for the short comings of the few. The professions at home may have the ordinary proportion of effective and ineffective men; not so with the picked missionary force. Even the common-place are not fit for this service; only the excellent can suffice. This great work must be greatly manned, as well as greatly administered and greatly supported."

The mails from the south need fixing pretty badly. This morning Medford papers three days old, and Eugene and Albany papers of Wednesday were left here by the obliging mail clerks on the trains. The papers are too good to be treated that way.

President Fish is 6 feet 4 inches, built in proportion, and a great "four flusher." The papers every day have a story about some one calling the big chump a liar, and he, "with his eyes flashing," saying "no man is big enough to call me a liar," and yet dozens of them do.

of the various Indian attributes as is to be found.

According to the United States Government Photographs the Game. bureau of ethnology no photograph of this game has ever been taken, but it is understood that one or two excellent pictures have been taken of the play this year at Toppenish. The games have been between the Yakima Indians on one side and the Nez Perce on the other. Yesterday's game was won by the Yakimas, making two wins out of three for them, which pretty nearly cleaned up their Nez Perce friends.

Indians on the grounds yesterday embraced representatives of nearly every tribe between the Palouse country and the coast and from the Colville reservation to the Columbia. They have been slow in coming in, but the day saw them out in paint and feathers by the hundreds.—East Oregonian.
