X-RAYS

Victor Dorris' subject tonight will be "One hundred degrees above zero," or "Hell." It strikes the horse editor that the eloquent speaker is too modest in his figures on the thermometer. If statements concerning the Arizona section of the lower regions are correct. There is an old story that a preacher hearing a profane youth remark that it was "hotter than h—l," rebuked the young fellow, and, among other things, asked him if he had any idea how hot that place was. "I don't know," replied the hardened young rascal, "but I suppose after a fellow was there awhile and was given a feed of melted iron, he would swear he was eating ice cream."

Any law that hits a corporation in the pocket strikes its heart, and is unconstitutional and criminal. Strange what veneration the big companies have for the constitution, anyway. One would think the officers carried a copy of that venerable instrument around in their pockets.

Critique Duvall's Appointment.

The promotion of Brigadier General William P. Duvall to the rank of major general vice William S. McCaskey, retired is an act of the President which will be criticised by veterans of the civil war who have been passed over as well as by the friends of General Frederick Funston. The rise of General Duvall has been so rapid as to excite the suspicion of favoritism. He was made a brigadier only 18 months ago. He did not serve in the field during the Spanish war, but later in the Philippine rebellion he distinguished himself as colonel of the Forty-eighth Volunteer infantry. General Thomas H. Barry, now commanding the Cuban army of occupation, has a better Philippine record and had been a brigadier-general two years and five months before Lieutenant Colonel Duvall was promoted. Others having precedence of Duvall were Generals Tasker H. Bliss, Albert L. Mills, and Winfield S. Edgerly. On the list of Effect of City Noises on the Brain.

A writer in the Vossische Zeitung Berlin asserts that summer vacation, spot at the seashore or in the mountains is essentially a device to escape from nerve exhaustion due to city noise. Such an escape is a necessity for both adult and child, he continues; but while the adult of strong nerves can counteract the injurious effect of city noise by spending a few weeks each year in the country, a child requires a somewhat longer change. Heretofore this necessity of escape from noise has not received much attention from educators of children, but now, says the writer, advocates of better school hygiene "are asking why so much care is taken to spare the eyes of pupils and so little is said of the delicacy and sensibility of their ears?" We read further:

"Usually the situation of a school is such that the noises of the city reach the pupils easily, fret their ears and weaken their attention. Interrupted by distraction, the thought of the pupils is very often incited to new and burdensome effort, and how irritating and obstructive this is those know who have cause to appreciate the urgent importance of concentration.

"The least result of necessary habitual resistance to the noises is that the ear is dulled—that is, the noises that surround the resident of a great city constantly produce an oscillation of the mechanism of the ear that weakens the nerves that connect the ear with consciousness.

"Therefore, the finer a brain is the more grossly it is disturbed in its activity by purposeless impressions on the ear. The Roman law recognized this fact, for it forbade a coppersmith to enter any street on which a teacher lived.

"In regard to disturbance of the sense of hearing this can be caused for instance, by the intrusion of foreign particles and bodies, by an insufficient or unusual secretion of the wax of the ear, by dangerous agitation of the bones of the skull by blow or fall, and by the development of abnormal growths in the cavities of the nose, and frequent aggressive sound, especially in the city. Educators have, therefore, an incentive to give prompt and zealous attention to the care of the ear among pupils, for they must know that the sense of hearing is of very great importance for mental development, in its intellectual as well as in its temperamental phase. In the intellectual phase it facilitates the study of the language of sound, and what would our temperamental life be without the sensibility of the ear? Constantly the external world is influencing our psychic being through the ear. Through sound the most intimate feeling is divulged. Hence the great effect of conversational and forensic art and of music on the human temperament. In the intensity and quality of its impressions a dulled ear is quite different from the normal ear. Even sensibility of vision is diminished by deafness. As the ear has ceased to call attention to many things happening around it, these naturally escape the eye. The effect of this on speech, thought and conduct reveals the mental defect of different persons with more or less urgency. A child with dulled ears lives in another world, secludes itself, and the false judgment to which it is exposed is a sinister obstacle to the development of its character. A deaf child is a prey to misfortune as soon as it enters the ordinary school, where it must be a laggard and finally be treated as a weakling. For such a child relief may be conducted by persons who have studied thoroughly the correct treatment of aural defects and their effect on the daily intellectual and temperamental life of the children afflicted with them."

Hawaii's Show Volcano.

Kilauea, the spur of the great Mauna Loa, is a well-behaved volcano, as it can be visited with perfect safety, even if in eruption—as it is from time to time—when exhibitions of activity are given that are worth traveling thousands of miles to witness. This volcano is on the island of Hawaii, and the shortest possible trip that can be made to it from Honolulu covers four days. This allows only half a day at the volcano, which is much too short a time to study the workings of what is considered one of the world's wonders. A week at least should be given to the trip. The sea voyage is always more or less rough, but the boats, although small, are comfortable. From Hilo, where the water trip ends, there is a railroad ride of about eighteen miles through the big Oiaa sugar plantation. This is followed by a stage run of eleven miles over a road leading through a perfect fairyland of tropical foliage, the highway being lined on either side with roses, magnolias and ferns, which last grow to the size of trees without losing any of their delicate beauty. Returning by the other route, there is a stage drive of 35 miles over the lava roads and across the great flow which ran into the sea from Mauna Loa several years ago. —Leslie's Weekly.

AUREL BATONYI.

Mr. Batonyi came to this country from Austria and became noted as a riding master and exhibitor of blooded horses. Mrs. James B. Burke-Roche of New York and Newport employed him in the latter capacity and afterward married him. The marriage was against the wish of her father, Frank Work, and she is now seeking a divorce from him at the latter's request, as it is believed.

brigadiers were the five veterans of the civil war.

By seniority General Funston, who, when his turn came for promotion, asked that General William S. McCaskey, a civil war veteran, be advanced, was doubly entitled to the vacant rank. General Funston's record in the Spanish war and the Philippine rebellion was brilliant compared with that of Colonel Duvall. During the San Francisco crisis following the earthquake General Funston further distinguished himself. He has never been found wanting. Funston has served as a brigadier-general since April 1, 1901. —New York Sun.

The Uncongenial Pump.

"That famous temperance reformer, the late Francis Murphy," said a Pittsburg man, "had an odd adventure in the course of his very useful life.

"He once told me of a case where a drinking man with a neat joke got for the moment a little the better of him in an argument.

"The man was a clubman, a bon vivant, famous for his wine cellar, and Mr. Murphy read him a strong lecture on the drink evil.

"But the bon vivant only smiled, shook his head and said:

"Well, Mr. Murphy, I have seen many a pleasant party round a table, but I have never seen one round a pump."

Concessions.

"Don't you think the railways ought to make some concessions to the people?"

"We do make concessions," answered Mr. Datsin Stax. "Some of our railway men are rich enough to run trains entirely for our own pleasure and convenience. Yet we let the public ride on the cars."

ISAAC D. GREGG BURIED.

Oldest Odd Fellow in World Laid to Rest By Brothers.

Isaac D. Gregg, reputed to be the oldest Odd Fellow in the world, who died Thursday, was buried yesterday. Odd Fellows' hall was crowded with members from Salt Lake lodges, Nos. 12, 3, 15 and 17, and friends of the dead man. Services were conducted by Noble Grand James McGrath. Rev. D. M. Helmick paid Mr. Gregg an eloquent tribute, paying special attention to the 60 years the old couple have spent together, happy and without ever a cross word. Mrs. Gregg was present to take a last look at the face she has seen always smiling and hopeful during 60 years. The pallbearers were E. H. Smith, William Watrous, Oliver Recore, J. H. Gertz, J. D. McCarthy and W. L. Boardman.

Extracts from Rev. Mr. Helmick's talk follows:

"He had been an Odd Fellow for 61 years, and asked that the collar, which he had never disgraced, be buried with him. Would that every Odd Fellow could as sincerely ask for such an honor, rightly won on drawing near the end of life.

"Throughout his life Mr. Gregg maintained the honorable record of a family which had furnished the nation with worthy men. His grandfather fought in the war of the revolution with George Washington, his father in the war of 1812, and he went through the civil war.

"He was married in 1847. His wife and six children survive him. He lived to see grandchildren and great grandchildren grow up about him.

"He was an Odd Fellow long before many of us were born and during his long life saw the wonderful changes which have taken place in his native land. When he was young neighborhoods which were 50 to 100 miles distant were farther than New York and San Francisco today. He saw the old means of travel give way to the rushing express trains. In his youth, men could not talk to one another except face to face. He saw the change wrought by science which enables men to converse and recognize on another's voice from points 500 miles apart.

"His widow, the companion of his long life, was with him as these changes were wrought, and perhaps can scarcely recognize in the world of today the world she knew 50 years ago." —Deseret (Salt Lake) News, Oct. 19.

Attlicted with Sore Eyes for 33 Years

I have been afflicted with sore eyes for 33 years. Thirteen years ago I became totally blind and was blind for six years. My eyes were badly inflamed. One of my neighbors insisted upon my trying Chamberlain's Salve and gave me half a box of it. To my surprise it healed my eyes and my sight came back to me.—P. C. Earle, Cynthiana, Ky. Chamberlain's Salve is for sale at Dr. Stone's drug store.

Pennsylvania's Tree Bounty.

There is a law on the statute books of Pennsylvania which ought to have a wide circulation. It is "an act for the encouragement of forestry."

This law takes the best means possible to encourage owners of land to preserve and propagate timber trees, for it allows a reduction of taxes to the owners of forest land which comes up to certain requirements of the act. The first man to take advantage of the new law is an Allegheny county farmer, Mr. Tenner of Lee township. Mr. Tenner has obtained from the county commissioners a reduction of $22.50 on his taxes for complying with the provisions of the law. —Pittsburg Telegraph.
