

EMMY FOUND IN ALASKA.

Preserved Specimen of Ancient Embalmer's Art Now in Seattle.

Salem, Nov. 26.—There arrived here on one of the last boats of the season from the islands of the Alaskan archipelago the splendidly preserved body of an Alaskan mummy, the first to be received from the north.

The body was brought south by Edward Hardy, a well known Alaskan of 15 years' experience, who intends to exhibit the mummy at the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific exposition which will be held at Seattle in 1909.

Hardy holds strong beliefs that, in many ways, the Alaskans of prehistoric days were considerably higher in point of civilization and disposition than history credits. At the exposition of 1909 there will be mummies of ancient Egypt, which will be compared with those from Alaska.

The splendid specimen which was found buried in a rocky cave on Hardy's island is evidently the body of a chief or warrior of note, who has probably been lying undisturbed for several hundred years.

The body after being embalmed was placed in furs which are still in perfect condition, the dry cold air of the archipelago acting as a perfect preservative. The body was stretched out on a plank to which it was attached when discovered.
