Residence and Moral City.
 the residence and educational Salem can be commended to wishing to find a city in which to educate their children. Families and hundreds of stu- dents come here to live from all of the state. Living is not ex- pensive and the moral tone of the city is very good. It is above the average, and has all the advantages of a larger city in the way of li- braries, churches, Y. M. C. A. and other branches, including night school, gymnasium and swimming pool with none of the drawbacks of a large metropolis. The sanitary conditions of the city are looked after by a board of Health, and a vigil- ant police keep order. Such things as burglaries, robberies, and criminal offenses are almost unknown. Salem is a well equipped collegiate and scholastic center of the northwest.

T. Richardson, Dean of the Oregon Law School.
 Dean of the Oregon Law School has moved his private li- brary and law offices and recitation hall into the new Meyers-Strong block on State street. Mr. Richardson has conducted his law school for many years in this city and has to his credit some of the most successful younger members of the bar in the state. He also has been a school under the same in- struction and faculty at Portland, and is growing in attendance. Mr. Richardson has devoted his life to the study of legal science and the advancement of this science to those who are to equip themselves for the practice of the profession. In his regular line of work he has been

 College of Music is, undoubt- edly, more prosperous and more known this year than ever in its history. Pupils are in at- tention from five states and from a large city in the northwest. Those coming as they do from Idaho, Eastern Oregon, Washington and other places, speak well for the quality and well earned reputation of this part of the Willamette University. For this wide spread reputation and for the prosperity of the past year, the dean of the college joins with a thankful people in keeping this day.

PEERLESS ORCHESTRA.
Under the Leadership of Salem's Talented Violinist Miss Lillian Stege.

The Peerless Orchestra is recognized as an important factor in the musical and social life of Salem. Nor is this all—it is in demand in other cities of the Willamette Valley. It is composed of musicians of ability and is capable of handling the best of all classes of music created by noted composers, both ancient and modern.

Conductors of travelling musical attractions are lavish with their praise of the support given by the Peerless Orchestra on their appearance in the Salem Grand Opera House. These musicians are capable of rendering an opera at sight under the baton of an efficient director. The people should be proud of this organization and those composing the orchestra should feel gratified at their achievement. The future of these musicians is assured and it certainly looks rosy. It is satisfaction of the management and the thousands of visitors who attended the exposition.

Brief Sketch of Marion County.

Population, 29,670; Salem is the county seat; soil is mainly valley land; fine agricultural; eastern portion mountainous; good water power; coal prospects, none developed; timber, mainly fir; Santiam and tributaries excellent for logging; Willamette principal stream; wood for fuel, averages from $2.75 to $5 per cord; wheat, oats, fruit and hops principal products; Salem, the capital of the state, principal city; Willamette University located in Salem; State Penitentiary, State Insane Asylum, State Reform School, School for the Blind, School for the Deaf and Dumb located here; general health good; pure water; unexcelled climate; mineral springs with good curative qualities exist in the county; beautiful scenery; paupers are cared for principally at the poor- farm; there are eight inmates, all males; a few are cared for at their homes, the county furnishing aid; the general wage scale that prevails throughout the western portion of Oregon governs here; county out of debt and transacting business upon

The Warren Construction Co. of Boston, Mass., with offices at Portland in the Lumberman's Exchange block, has established a large and expensive plant in this city and has employed here the past few months fifty men on its paving work, fifteen men on the rock crushing plant, eight teams and a train of electric dump cars to distribute the rock. H. E. Chipman has been superintendent of Construction at Salem. R. E. Berkheimer is foreman of the mixing plant. N. W. Scharf is foreman of the surfacing crew, and it is the general opinion that these men have done a very nice piece of work. Our wide straight streets look beautiful when paved. With a solid gravel foundation, the crushed rock that is being used in making this pavement is the most wonderful natural material ever employed in any city in the country. It makes a pavement that is practically indestructible. The crushed rock is furnished by a crew of men under J. G. Smart, foreman of the crushing plant owned by the General Contracting Co. of Portland.

Don't Croak, But Be Thankful.

Geo. Eyre of the Salem Shoe Store gives the Capital Journal these as his Thanksgiving sentiments:
 "Don't croak! Providence put bull frogs and ravens on earth to croak, not human beings. In fact, the croak of the raven and of the bull frog is misunderstood—it is really an expression of joy, hope and love used when they are courting. No animal on earth, except man, really croaks, as the term is understood. Even the howl of the wolf is merely a call note announcing the discovery of a food prospect and inviting his friends to participate. The country is all right, the people are all right, prices are all right and finances are all right, except in speculative, overcapitalized and inflated watered stocks, and they are being squeezed and should be. We are going to have the biggest and best holiday trade ever experienced. All we are to do is to look outward and upward, not downward and backward. It is the duty of every business man at present to look on the bright side and to be an optimist. If we all sit down, fold our hands, roll up our eyes, and croak, business will suffer. The business situation is all right if we do not let it

One Oregon Town That is Proud of Having a Good Military Band.

Salem should justly feel proud of its reputation for being one of the foremost musical centers of the northwest. Besides the orchestras, various choral societies, several vocal quartets, mandolin and guitar clubs and stringed quintets, Salem has a band which probably can not be excelled in any city of like population in the United States.

The present organization of the Salem Military Band was perfected about two years ago and in its membership are experienced musicians who have filled engagements with the best musical aggregations of the country. The band is supported by the citizens and business men of the city by a popular subscription and in return the members of the organization give an open air concert in the city parks at least once per week when the water permits. The band volunteered to render two concerts during the past summer playing Sunday afternoon and Wednesday evening which entertainments have been a source of great pleasure to the music loving public.

Henry N. Stoudenmeyer, the director of the band is a cornetist composer and arranger of rare attainments and the success of the organization is largely due to his efficient and untiring work. He was cornet soloist with the Julius Adler's band of Iowa also soloist for a season with the Venice of America band at Venice, California. He was for six years director of the Chemawa Indian School band and is at present besides being leader of the city organization instructor of band instruments of the Willamette university.

The Salem Military Band has for many years furnished many of the musicians for the state fair band and during the years of 1904 and 1906 received the contract for furnishing the music for the fair which engagement was filled to the entire a strictly cash basis; a line of boats ply the Willamette river the year through between Salem and Portland; the S. P. R. R. runs through the county; an electric line is being built from Salem to Portland; three passenger trains rally to and from Portland; greatest hop-growing center in the world for quality and quantity; there is an excellent grade of flax grown in this county for linen fiber, the average yield being about three and one-half tons of straw and twenty bushels of seed to the acre. Marion County has no unsurveyed land, but there are 6,855 acres of surveyed public land to be taken; it is broken, but good farming and grazing; Marion's area is 778,000 acres; there are 120,897 acres in the public reserve, 1,922 acres having been transferred from the reserve to the unappropriated land since 1904; the acres appropriated are 650,248 of the amount 1,332 acres were taken during the last two years.

The Capital City Has Adopted Warren's Bitulidic Paving for Its Wide and Beautiful Streets.

Salem streets are being paved with the most expensive pavement in the world—and by 150 cities considered the best pavement that can be laid. About 1000 feet of Court street, the finest residence part of the city has been laid with it to the perfect satisfaction of the property owners. Ten blocks of State street has been or-contribute something to your Thanksgiving number, we will first state, that the Gideon Stolz Company is thankful for a fair increase in business, a constant growing demand, and a growing confidence in our goods and our fair business methods. This, from a purely commercial standpoint, is a great deal to be thankful for.

But what is business without a home, a home in a home town, or city, and that city in Oregon. So here we have even more to be thankful for. Our business is in Oregon and in the ideal home city of Salem—a new Salem, a live, wide-awake people, who will put Salem to the front and keep her there, a people who will, at the next city election, adopt the new charter, not because it is perfection but because it is one hundred per cent better than the present, not because it relegates great power to a few, but because it centralizes responsibility.

So we might enumerate many more blessings in the way of a social and business life, but in conclusion, allow us to thank you for this favor, and may your efforts be crowned with success, your friends multiply, and Salem advance and always be first as the home city, and second in size in the State.

Salem Lawyer Who Has Been in Some Big Cases.

M. E. Pogue came to Salem in 1879, and was for several years employed in the offices of the State Insurance Company. He was an expert stenographer and court reporter, and kept up this work, reporting many of the most difficult trials. He read law and was admitted to the bar in 1895. He conducted the important suit brought to test the new city of Salem charter. In the recent suit of Johnson vs. Savage he won out before the Supreme court when few thought it was possible. He also assisted Tilmon Ford in the recent referendum suits and was able to render successful assistance in that important litigation. Mr. Pogue's offices are in the Ladd and Busk bank building.

One of Salem's Successful Lawyers and Real Estate Men.

P. L. Frasier is a graduate of Willamette University law school, and afterwards read law under Judge Bonham. He made a specialty of real estate law and has practiced and attended to real estate business and probate matters and collections since 1901. His office is in the D'Arcy building, and he has a large line of farm lands and city property for sale. Mr. Frasier has a good reputation for attending closely to any business entrusted to his hands.
