

JUST A REMINDER

A Range That Will Bake Evenly and Thoroughly.

YOU know from sad experience that you can't do good baking if one part of your oven is hotter than another.

And in most steel and cast iron ranges, the oven is not heated uniformly.

Because it is simply flanged over and riveted, and the seams filled with stove-putty.

A few heatings and coolings, and the putty falls out, leaving an open crack to suck in outside air and cause the fire to burn unevenly.

Or perhaps the damper is in front, or on one side of the range, which prevents an even production of heat to flow over and around the oven.

Now the Monarch Oven bakes evenly at all times.

The sides and the oven are riveted to Malleable Iron frames extending all through the range, making tight, solid joints with no chance of air-leaks.

Then the Duplex Draft—a damper both front and back—lets air in at both ends of the fire-box, causing a uniform heat production which means an evenly heated oven, one that will not burn the bottom of the bread while the top is unbaked, but bakes thoroughly and satisfactorily through and through.

You can control the heat just as you desire for roasts or baking of any kind.

Lloyd-Hixson.

Among the several pretty weddings of this week was the nuptials of Miss Gertrude Margaret Lloyd and Leonard B. Hixson, which was solemnized at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Bessie Lloyd, in East Salem, Thursday morning, November 28, 1907, at 11:30 o'clock, Rev. Frank C. Butler officiating.

Both young people are well known in this city, where they have a wide circle of friends. The bride is one of Salem's accomplished young ladies, and the groom is a popular mechanic in the Watt Shipp bicycle store on Commercial street.

Mr. and Mrs. Hixson left on the afternoon train for Portland and other points of interest for a two-weeks' honeymoon trip, after which they will be at home in their cottage on East Chemeketa street to their many friends.

Probably the largest crowd both of spectators and skaters that ever attended a session of the rink was present, and as the music, which was furnished by McElroy's rink band, was the best and the costumes worn by the graceful performers were elaborate there were all the essentials of a jolly evening which will be treasured in the memory of all present.

Shortly before 10 o'clock, after the picturesque whirl of the grand march, prizes were awarded as follows: Best ladies costume, a pair of skates awarded to lady representing "Night." NO NEED FOR MONEY LEGISLATION

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Washington, Nov. 30.—As conditions in the financial world grow more reassuring, the sentiment of the congressional leaders regarding currency legislation is becoming more and more conservative. Senator Allison believes that congress will go very slow in considering changes in the currency laws. Allison is the ranking member of the senate committee on finance, and next to the all-powerful chairman, Aldrich, is the most influential member of that committee.

Senator Allison said that no action would be taken by congress, except after a most thorough and careful consideration. No emergency bill will be rushed through in response to demands that something be done at once.

Senator Allison said that if business conditions continue to improve as they have been improving the last few days, normal conditions will have been established early in January.

Then the necessity for radical currency legislation will disappear.

AMERICAN FARMERS PROSPER

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Submits Annual Report to Congress That Meets Monday, and Makes a Remarkable Showing of Production.

It has been a year of untoward conditions, requiring all the industry and skill of the farmers to grow an average crop. They have struggled not only with an erratic season, but with a scarcity of help in all the states and territories of the Union.

Average Crop and Highest Income.

Such a year as 1907 has been, with its hard winter, summer weather in March, and late cold springs, gives exceptional emphasis to the wisdom of this department's policy of diversifying farm products and of establishing new crops. A general crop failure in a field as large as the chief part of the temperate zone of a continent must be a rare occurrence.

No general crop failure afflicts the farmer this year, not even within small areas. The production of the farms, all things considered, IS WELL UP TO THE AVERAGE of the previous five years in quantity, while its value to the farmer, as now appears at this annual day of reckoning, REACHES A FIGURE MUCH ABOVE THAT OF 1906, which by far exceeded any previous year's wealth production on farms.

Out of the farming operations of 1907, the railroads will get an average haul of freight, and foreign countries will take a heavy excess above home consumption. The farmer will have more to spend and more to invest THAN HE EVER BEFORE HAD OUT OF HIS YEAR'S WORK.

With an average production of about 15 bushels per acre, durum wheat this year covered an area of over 3,000,000 acres, many of them valueless for agricultural purposes before the advent of this new crop. Its value to the farmer is over twice the entire cost of the department of agriculture during the current fiscal year, including the weather bureau, the costly meat inspection and the forest service.

The beet-sugar industry in this country had not advanced beyond experiment and given promise until 1888. Since that year it has rapidly grown, under aid and encouragement from the department of agriculture and the experiment stations by congress and several state legislatures.

As an acquisition to agriculture much may be said in favor of growing sugar beets for the factory. Tillage must be of the best and the soil fertile. The pulp of the beets, after the extraction of the sugar, is relished by live stock. The crop is grown under factory contract conditions, and the farmer knows upon what he may depend for profit.

In 16 states there were 64 factories in 1906, with a capacity of working 49,500 tons of beets daily. Factories with more than three-fifths of this capacity are situated in the western division of states, and in that region this new crop has so well established itself and the growing of sugar beets has proved to be so remunerative that sugar beet farms of the medium sort increased in value $42.49 per acre from 1900 to 1905, as determined by special investigation by the department of agriculture, or from $99.47 per acre in 1900 to $141.96 in 1905.

Alfalfa, that extraordinary plant for producing wealth and doing wonders to farms, is occupying an important place in the plans of the department of agriculture, the experiment stations and the agricultural colleges. Through their efforts largely it has rapidly gained success in cultivation throughout a vast area. The value of the crop as hay this year is supposed to be $100,000,000, and if the plans and efforts now under way to promote its extension receive a reasonable reward the value of the future crop will be several times the present amount.

Among the large efforts that have the effect of giving steadiness to the agricultural production of the nation at times of threatened adversity is irrigation. This is almost entirely confined to the arid and semi-arid regions west of the one hundredth meridian and to the rice coast of the Gulf of Mexico in Texas and Louisiana, but will move eastward as its value is learned.

The area now under irrigation is

Some Advice and Prescription from an Eminent Authority

"The people here do not get enough water to keep healthy. I have claimed a well-known fact. The numerous cases of kidney trouble, kidney and bladder disease, and rheumatism are making it plain to the fact that the drinking of water is the greatest medicine, but neglected."

Stop loading your system with patent medicines and crooked get on the water wagon. If you are really sick, why, of course, take proper medicines—plain vegetable treatment, which will shatter the nerves or ruin the stomach."

When requested for a prescription for the cure of kidney and kidney trouble the answer was: "You must make the blood do their work; they are the blood of the blood. They must be strained out of the blood. Matter and acids that cause kidney trouble; the urine must be strained out of the blood. This is the cause of kidney and poor digestion. For conditions I would suggest the following prescription: Plain water."

Dandelion, one-half ounce, pound Syrup Saccharum, ounces. Mix by shaking bottle and take in small doses after each meal and at bedtime, but don't forget to drink plenty of water. This valuable information is simple prescription should be up in each household and the first sign of an attack of kidney trouble, headache or urinary trouble, no matter how slight.

It is better to cure the kidney than to take chances of complications. The best cough cure is Kemp's Balsam. Druggists sell it for 25c and 50c a bottle.
