IT WAS NOT MURDER.

ere from here, and in less than an hour W. H. Crittenden, of the Aurora party found, the dead body of Mr. Phegley in a dense growth of underbrush, about 300 yards from where the buggy had been found the previous day. The body was found under a large fallen tree, that afforded shelter from the rain, and laid in an easy position, as if the man had fallen asleep. The body was lying partially on the left side, and part of the right chest, nose and part of the right ear had been eaten away by animals or birds. When discovered no marks of violence were discernible on the body, and it looked like a case of suicide, as an 8-ounce bottle of arsenic, a preparation for the cure of scabies, was found near by, partly emptied. Coroner Clough was at once notified, but as the case looked like suicide, he deputized H.

A Snyder, of this city, to act in the matter, and take charge of the remains. The body was brought to the city about 11 o'clock, and taken to Mr. Snyder's undertaking rooms. When the clothing was removed from the body it was found that the left jugular had been cut, and a deep stab made over the region of the heart. There was no cut through the clothing to show that any wounds had been made, and the head of the dead man was lying on the left side, so that it was impossible to tell that he had cut his throat. The underclothing had been rolled up over the region of the heart, and there was a knife cut through them.

As soon as it was ascertained that there were marks of violence on the body a searching party consisting of J. W. Cole, S. A. Miller, W. H. Crittenden, M. H. Lee, Geo. Fry, Lorin Snyder, Ed. Becke and four correspondents, drove to the place where the body had been found, and close to where the body had been lying J. W. Cook found a two-bladed pocket knife, with the large blade, two and a half inches long, and dirt-pointed, open--the weapon with which Mr. Phegley evidently killed himself. Seven dollars was found in a pocketbook--a $5 gold piece, a silver dollar, a 50-cent and 25-cent piece, two dimes and a nickel, together with a gold pen, a pair of spectacles and some small trinkets. The following letter and order, in Mr. Phegley's handwriting, were also found in his coat pocket:

Canby, Or., Dec. 15, 1907.
Mr. A. H. Lewis:
Dear Sir: I will have to send these bills back to you, and you send them up or send a man to deliver, and what is left send to Mrs. Ida Redman, at Canby, Oregon. This delivery at Canby is set for the 18th. You see to that, and what is left pay to Mrs. Ida Redman. I have got into trouble here and will have to skip. It is more spite work than anything else. There is $75 in the bank here for you. I will send you an order for it. I will say goodbye, with wishes. JAMES PHEGLEY.

Canby, Or., Dec. 14, 1907.

Canby Bank & Trust Co., of Canby, Oregon. Please pay to the order of H. A. Lewis $75 and oblige

JAMES PHEGLEY.
The letter and the order had not been sent to their address, for the reason, it is supposed, that Mr. Phegley had not intended to collect any money on the trip he started out on, an ditch is borne out from the fact that he instructed all his patrons whom he saw on the trip to pay the money due him direct to the nursery people.

The remains were taken to Canby Thursday and the funeral will be held from there today.
From information gained from relatives of the deceased it is learned that Mr. Phegley's mind was unbalanced, and he was suffering from imaginary troubles, as he was comfortably well off financially. On Sunday night, December 15, he arose from bed and told his daughter, Mrs. Redman, that he could not sleep--that something was pinching him and pulling the bed clothes off, and that he was going to drive to Portland and he went and hitched his horse and made the drive. When he returned Monday he went to his room, and did not seem inclined to hold any communication with the family, which was not thought much of at the time. It had always been his custom when going out on a trip to bid his two grand children, Mrs. Redman's two daughters, goodbye, but when he left for his trip Tuesday morning, December 17, he did not ask to see his children, and his daughter, Mrs. Redman, particularly noticed this omission from his usual custom.

The movements of Mr. Phegley have been traced by Mr. J. W. Cook, of Woodburn, son-in-law of the deceased, from the time he left home until Wednesday morning, December 18, when all trace was lost. Two children of A. Widstrand gave the information that, while on their way to school, they had seen a man answering Mr. Phegley's description in a buggy about two miles from where the buggy was found, and it was on this clue that the searchers worked, and finally found the buggy. It is supposed that he drove into the woods where the buggy was found about 9 o'clock Wednesday, the 18th, and shortly after committed the deed that ended his life.
Mr. Phegley moved from Glenelder, Kansas, to Oregon 20 years ago this Christmas. He first settled in Silverton, and lived for a time in Brownsville, Harrisburg and Woodburn, and then moved to Canby, where had resided for the past 15 years.
He leaves the following relatives: Grant Phegley, of Portland; Fred Phegley, of Portland; Smauel Phegley, of Woodburn; Mrs. Belle Cook, of Woodburn, and Mrs. Ida Redman, of Canby.

Rev. Carlisle P. B. Martin, L. L. D. Of Waverly, Texas, writes: "Of a morning, when first arising, I often find a troublesome collection of phlegm which produces a cough and is very hard to dislodge; but a small quantity of Ballard's Horehound Syrup will at once dislodge it, and the trouble is over. I know of no medicine that is equal to it, and it is so pleasant to take. I can most cordially recommend it to all persons needing a medicine for throat or lung trouble." Sold by D. J. Fry.
