

PERUNA EDITORIAL NO. 2.

Dr. Hartman has claimed for many years that Peruna is an EXCELLENT CATARRH REMEDY. Some of the doctor's critics have disputed the doctor's claim as to the efficacy of Peruna.

Since the ingredients of Peruna are no longer a secret, what do the medical authorities say concerning the remedies of which Peruna is composed? Take, for instance, the ingredient HYDRASTIS CANADENSIS, OR GOLDEN SEAL. The United States Dispensary says of this herbal remedy, that it is largely employed in the treatment of depraved mucous membranes, chronic rhinitis (nasal catarrh), atonic dyspepsia (catarrh of the stomach), chronic intestinal catarrh, catarrhal jaundice (catarrh of the liver), and in diseased mucous membranes of the pelvic organs. It is also recommended for the treatment of various forms of diseases peculiar to women.

Another ingredient of Peruna, CORYDALIS FORMOSA, is classed in the United States Dispensary as a tonic.

CEDRON SEEDS is another ingredient of Peruna, an excellent drug that has been very largely overlooked by the medical profession for the past fifty years. THE SEEDS ARE TO BE FOUND IN VERY FEW DRUG STORES. The United States Dispensary says of the action of cedron that it is used as a bitter tonic and in the treatment of dysentery, and in intermittent diseases as a SUBSTITUTE FOR QUININE.

OIL OF COPAIBA, another ingredient of Peruna, is classed by the United States Dispensary as a mild stimulant and diuretic. It acts on the stomach and intestinal tract. It acts as a stimulant on the genito-urinary membranes. Useful in chronic cystitis, chronic dysentery and diarrhea, and some chronic diseases of the liver and kidneys.

These opinions as to the ingredients of Peruna are held by all writers on the subject, including Bartholow and Scudder.

OF HYDRASTIS, BARTHOLOW SAYS it is applicable to stomatitis of the pharynx, chronic oozing (catarrh of the head). This writer classifies hydrastis as a stomachic tonic, useful in atonic dyspepsia (chronic gastric catarrh), catarrh of the duodenum, catarrh of the gall duct, catarrh of the intestines, catarrh of the kidneys (chronic Bright's disease), catarrh of the bladder, and catarrh of other pelvic organs.

BARTHOLOW REGARDS COPAIBA as an excellent remedy for chronic catarrh of the bladder, chronic bronchitis (catarrh of the bronchial tubes).

BARTHOLOW STATES THAT CUBEB, an ingredient of Peruna, promotes the appetite and digestion, increases the circulation of the blood. Useful in chronic nasal catarrh, follicular pharyngitis (catarrh of the pharynx), increasing the tonicity of the mucous membranes of the throat. It also relieves hoarseness. Useful in atonic dyspepsia (catarrh of the stomach), and in chronic catarrh of the colon and rectum, catarrh of the bladder, prostaticorrhea, and chronic bronchial affections.

MILLSPAUGH, MEDICINAL PLANTS, one of the most authoritative works on medicinal herbs in the English language, in commenting upon COLLINSONIA CANADENSIS, says that it acts on the pneumogastric and vaso motor nerves. It increases the secretions of the mucous membranes in general. In the mountains of Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and Carolina, collinsonia canadensis is considered a panacea for many disorders, including headache, colic, cramp, drowsy and indigestion. DR. SCUDDER regards it highly as a remedy in chronic diseases of the lungs, heart disease and asthma.

These citations ought to be sufficient to show to any candid mind that Peruna is a catarrh remedy. Surely, such herbal remedies, that command the enthusiastic confidence of the highest authorities obtainable, brought together in proper combination, ought to make a catarrh remedy of the highest efficacy.

This is our claim, and we are able to substantiate this claim by ample quotations from the HIGHEST MEDICAL AUTHORITIES IN THE WORLD.

AITCHISON STANDS ON HIS PAST RECORD

Clyde B. Aitchison has announced himself a candidate for re-election as a member of the railroad commission of the state. Mr. Aitchison was appointed a member of the commission following the enactment of the railroad commission law by the last legislature, he being the choice of State Treasurer George A. Steele for the position.

In announcing his candidacy Mr. Aitchison says:

"My opportunities to prepare myself, and my experience along this line has been such as to qualify me for greater future usefulness, and are, I believe, of value to the state. For more than a year I was clerk of the commission to draft a new tax code for the state, and procured, checked and analyzed complete financial and traffic reports from all the railroads in Oregon for a period of seven years, in order to estimate their commercial value. Following this, with other counsel, I spent much time and labor preparing the railroad commission bill which the legislature later adopted. When this commission was created I was made a member, and ever since have devoted my whole time and energies to the organization and prosecution of the commission's business, as the only lawyer on the board. I feel that I know the duties of the office better, understand the pending work more intimately and can render more efficient future service than others whose experiences, if any, have been less recent and vigorous.

"The general public sentiment, I believe, is that the commission has 'made good'; that its members have been energetic and independent, and that a change in membership at this time would be a needless experiment, which would simply put the work back that much. If this is your judgment, may I earnestly request you to bring these facts home to the attention of your friends? May I count on your assistance?"

MILLER OF OLD AURORA

SAYS THE PEOPLE WANT THE LAW IN REGARD TO ELECTING SENATORS COMPLIED WITH, AND HE WILL ALWAYS VOTE FOR THE CHOICE OF THE VOTERS FOR UNITED STATES SENATOR.

Henry J. Miller, of Aurora, is out for representative, subject to the Republican primary election, April 17. He filed his petition today and will make a canvass of the county for the nomination. He was born and raised in the north end of the county, where his parents live, has a good common school education, and is a successful business man. He is a man of good habits and well qualified to represent the interests of the people in the lower house, to which he aspires.

For Statement No. 1.

Mr. Miller says, after talking with a great many people of his section, he came to the conclusion that they want a man to go to the legislature and attend to their business, and leave to them the nomination and election of an United States senator, and he unqualifiedly subscribes to Statement No. 1, and writes on his petition that he will always vote for the people's choice for senator, if elected.

In an interview Mr. Miller says this is also his own conviction on the subject of choosing senators. The more completely the matter can be taken out of the hands of the legislature the better the result. He says the old way has been tried and found wanting, and many of the best states in the Union are trying to provide direct election, until the United States constitution can be amended. He does not pretend that the Oregon law is perfect, but says it should be given a fair and full trial, and its defects remedied. He says it would not be right to throw down a law enacted by the people, and go back to the old Oregon style of political management, of which the people have shown they are dissatisfied. Mr. Miller will be in this part of the county for a few days and is meeting many of the business men of the city. He would make a good, strong aggressive representative as a member of a business delegation, and the people are to be congratulated that so good a man has come out for the place. Others are preparing to come forward and fill the ticket.

ARGUES RESPECT FOR LAW OR REPEAL

Corvallis Times Thinks That's a Virtue We Should Insist Upon.

Respect for law is a virtue we, above all other people should insist upon. Ours is a government of the people by the people. We have, in fact, no privileged class here,—no class above the laws, no governing class. All are equal before the law, all are governors.

Under other forms of government, under monarchies, for instance, where there is a governing class, of the few it may be, the law may be enforced upon the masses, whether they respect it or not, by powder and ball and bayonet thrust. But under the government of the people by the people, the enforcement of law must be, for the most part, by public sentiment.

This sentiment must enact the law, must respect it and must enforce it. If public sentiment do not enact a law it will work some innocent, unoffending body a wrong; if it do not respect a law it cannot be enforced; if it do not enforce a law it must be enforced with "a big stick"—with grape and canister and bayonet thrust and saber stroke.

How long would popular government survive under such conditions? Certainly not long. A government of the many by a few would be the quick result.

Popular government then, that is a government of the people by the people, must rest its perpetuity upon the respect of the people for laws of their own enactment.

But laws entitled to, and accorded respect, must really and truly express public sentiment. If we enact laws in advance of popular sentiment we cannot enforce them, because popular sentiment must be behind every law we seek to enforce.

From these considerations we deduct that no individual may run counter to public sentiment. That is, that each individual, whatever his personal sentiments may be, must bow to public sentiment; that no law should be enacted in advance of public sentiment; that whatever the character of a law, whether for good or for ill, it should be enforced. General Grant said the surest way to effect the repeal of a bad law is to enforce it.

But we do not do this. We run after sentiment and enact laws far in advance of public thought and demand. The law in itself may be good, righteous, but it may be so far in advance of public sentiment it cannot be enforced.

The result is we have laws which are dead letters; laws which each individual will observe or disregard, just as he may regard the necessity of such a law. In such case each man claims the right to judge for himself whether or not he will accept the law. It is easy to see that this is the ordinary notice of law.

Have we any law in advance of public sentiment? Look around us and see. If we have let us repeal it or enforce it, for we cannot risk the result of want of respect for law.

DUNBAR GOT THE COPPERS

and that the people had a right to know what officials got.

Stopped the Clock.

The talk was so fierce that the lawyers stopped the clock, or at least Judge Galloway adjourned court at 2:50, and gave the exhausted legal combatants time to get their wind, and decide how far the records should be probed. It was decided to set aside the original stipulations and that Secretary of State Benson be required to bring all the records of his office during the Dunbar regime into court. Fulton had been misunderstood, and promised to be good and McNary resumed the questioning. But at the first dash about how much of the life insurance fees were turned over by Dunbar, Fulton was on his feet and objected

THE WEALTH OF THE SOUTH.

Among the wonderful stories of industrial progress in the South none is more amazing than that of the growth of the Cotton Seed Oil industry. Years ago, after the cotton was ginned, the seed was thrown away as worthless; in fact it was regarded as a nuisance. Today cotton seed contributes millions of dollars annually to the wealth of the South. Improved processes of crushing the seed and refining the oil have resulted in a product equal to the best olive oil in nutritive value. From it is produced a cooking fat which is rapidly replacing lard. This cooking fat is called COTTON OIL and is claimed by manufacturers to be purer, and much more wholesome than lard, and it is more economical, too. As this fact becomes generally recognized, the use of Cotton Seed Oil in the form of COTTON OIL will be practically unlimited. COTTON OIL is destined to become the principal national shortening.

that Benson did not know of his personal knowledge. He said he did not.

"That is just why we want the books themselves here to prove by the record what the witness is swearing to," said McMahan.

Fulton objected that there was no way by which a public record could be introduced as evidence.

Big Follo Graft.

Benson next testified that the office transcribed 10,988 folios a year, 514 trademarks, and all paid fees to the secretary under the old law before the Flat Salary law went into effect. Dunbar was elected on a flat salary platform, but the law was staved off four years for his benefit.

Sam Koser Called.

As chief clerk for Dunbar he told the truth that he kept a record of the fees collected. Fulton objected to his telling what was done with the fees, but, when overruled, he said they were turned over to Dunbar. Unable to tell what all the fees were, McMahan accused witness of dodging, and demanded the books. Fulton objected, and was overruled, but Koser's testimony was vague, general, equivocal and side-splitting in its lack of the specific, and he was excused after several desperate attempts to pull the cork of his well-stored vintage of information.

McMahan demanded an order of the court for the books and records kept by Koser, and it was so ordered.

Gatens Got Busy.

W. N. Gatens was a less reluctant witness about furnishing the records as to commissions passing through the governor's office. Letters were shown between the governor and Dunbar tending to prove taking of fees in one class amounting to from $12,600 to $13,600 in 1904. Fulton took a fall out of Gatens, in which the latter came out on top, when he asked what the governor got in the way of fees. "Nothing but his $5000 a year." This was ruled out, as Bingham attacked the statement as being entirely for political effect.

Frank Lovell consumed the rest of the morning with painstaking information about the details of fees and the prices of commissions, and really made a good witness for the state by evidencing no disposition to conceal any facts he might have stowed away in a rather surprisingly capacious memory. Whenever he reached down in the pockets of his mental bloomers he pulled out facts of interest about the emoluments of the office Dunbar held for eight years.

Court adjourned to this afternoon when more will be forthcoming.

Good for Everybody.

Mr. Norman R. Coulter, a prominent architect, in the Delbert building, San Francisco, says: "I fully endorse all that has been said of Electric Bitters as a tonic medicine. It is good for everybody. It corrects stomach, liver and kidney disorders in a prompt and efficient manner and builds up the system." Electric Bitters is the best spring medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter; as a blood purifier it is unequalled; 50c at J. C. Perry's drug store.

SCHOOL HOUSE BURNT

before the walls crumble in, and prevent all hope of recovery.

Nearby homes have been turned into morgues and emergency hospitals, and a hastily organized band of nurses and rescuers are straining every nerve to bring order out of the chaos that reigns about the blazing building.

Piles of bodies are wedged in the doorways of the building above which totters a high brick wall which may fall at any moment. Oblivious of all danger mothers, fathers and firemen are daring all risks to bring these bodies to a place of safety.

It is a scene of horror that baffles description. For blocks about the scene of the disaster a great mob of people have gathered, hundreds of whom are personally interested in the outcome of the desperate battle that is being waged under the walls of the school building.

There were 300 children in the school building this morning.

A house to house canvass will be necessary before it can be definitely known just how many are missing. The fire broke out at 10:30 while the classes were reciting, and was caused by an overheated furnace.

The flames burst out suddenly and soon enveloped the entire building. At first the children responded to the fire drill quietly, and for a few moments it looked as if the building would be safely emptied of its human occupants. A sudden flash of fire startled some of the younger children, who screamed, and this caused the panic.

Teachers were swept aside, and all control was lost of the frenzied little minds.

Grace Fisk and Carrie Wiley, two primary grade teachers sacrificed their lives attempting to restore order to the snarled and tangled ranks of screaming and fighting girls and boys. The jam at the doorway was terrible. Dozens were killed and wounded at this point.

On the third floor the holocaust was heaviest. A hundred children were trapped in a school room, with all escape cut off. Maddened with fear many of them turned, and with lowered heads dashed into the seething pit, and were instantly killed by the hungry flames that swept about them as their writhing bodies dropped into the furnace. An aerial ladder was raised by the Cleveland firemen, and many were saved.

The Lake Shore railroad shops, which are located near the school house, were closed by the order of Superintendent Frazer and the workmen were rushed in gangs to the burning building, and put to work of rescue. In this work Wallace Upton was fatally burned, while rescuing a child. In all he saved 13 lives.

Herbert Eichlberger, aged 12, was on the second floor when the fire broke out.

"I ran to the door and fell over the mass of children on the steps, and so reached the door." "Then some one saw me and me out."

At 2 o'clock this afternoon bodies had been accounted for. It is now estimated that 120 were burned to death.

Collinwood is six miles from Cleveland on the shore of Lake Erie. A section of the town is in the employ of the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern system. Another section of the town is the site of palatial homes of Cleveland suburban residents that the families stricken by the frightful disaster are about divided between working and dying people.

At 2:15 o'clock this afternoon bodies had been taken from the ruins. They are at the temporary morgue in the Lake Shore shops. Deputy Coroner Mack says the total number of dead was 170.

Great crowds of weeping and relatives of the dead are attending the temporary morgue mission. The Collinwood police are unable to handle the situation. Have asked the chief of police of Cleveland for help.

At 3:15 this afternoon 14 bodies had been recovered from the ruins. It is feared that the frenzied relatives trying to gain access to the temporary morgue will force doors from their hinges.
