DUNBAR IS ORDERED INTO COURT

COURT IN EARNEST

IF DEFENDANT FAILS TO PUT IN APPEARANCE COURT THREATENS TO PROSECUTE FOR CONTEMPT—DEFENDANT WILL APPEAL.

Judge Galloway this afternoon made an order directing that former Secretary of State F. I. Dunbar appear in the circuit court and show cause why he should not be punished for contempt. The affidavit filed by Fulton today, to the effect that the fee books had been burned, was not valid because it had been written in the third person. Fulton has declared his intention of carrying the matter to the supreme court, and when the matter is called on the 18th will be prepared to furnish the bond set by Judge Galloway, it having been agreed at today's session of court that the former secretary should not have to undergo the indignity of being arrested.

Anticipating an order of the court for Dunbar to appear to answer the interrogations of the state's attorneys, Fulton called the attention of Judge Galloway to the technical error in the affidavit, in which failure was made to mention "that the books were in the possession of the defendant."

Arguing on this technicality and similar peccadilloes, Fulton assumed the position that he was willing to bring Dunbar into court if a subpoena were issued for him, but gave as an excuse for not having him come otherwise that "he might have 40 suits started against him."

McMahan, at the conclusion of Fulton's address, startled the defendant's attorneys that the joker—the writing of the affidavit in which the third person was used throughout nullified the document, and it ceased to be an affidavit—had been discovered.

The word "affidavit" was used throughout the entire document, and an McMahan called to the attention of the court, "if Dunbar had not told one word of truth in that paper, and we could prove he had those books, he could not be held for perjury."

Judge Galloway then rendered his decision, in substance, as follows:

"The court stated in the beginning of this trial that the case would probably go before the supreme court and it was, therefore, necessary that every fact should be elicited in regard to the charge, and it is the judgment of the court that the defendant Dunbar be brought to the stand and examined."

Here Sam Koser was the subject of a further censuring at the hands of Judge Galloway, who stated:

"This assistant to Secretary Benson, Mr. Koser, who evaded giving the truth, and whole truth, as he swore to do, will also be brought back to the witness stand, and made to answer straightforwardly."

Attorney Fulton here announced that he was prepared to resist the order, and carry the matter to the supreme court.

Judge Galloway set March 18th as the date for the citation to issue requiring Dunbar to show why he should not be fined for contempt of court. At that time Judge Galloway will agree to Dunbar's bond, which Fulton promises to produce on that moment.

Present Blank Sheets.

In course of his statement to counsel yesterday afternoon Judge Galloway said:

"The witnesses who have been here on the stand, and who were in a position to know, were called upon to give testimony as it bore upon this subject, and have presented a blank sheet of paper. Mr. Koser stated nothing. The court certainly is of the opinion that he knew a great deal about this matter; the defendant is not in court; the plaintiffs have at their command all of the powers of this court to bring these books into court, or bring the defendant, as the court wants all of the facts upon this matter. The defendant is not in court here. He can go on the stand and give light on the subject, and Mr. Koser can certainly have told a great deal. I want the defendant to consider that this is not a huge joke, to be taken without sincerity."

"The state of Oregon is a party plaintiff. He will give you all the time necessary, but I want you to understand the position of the court; it seems to me that this matter has been treated as a huge joke, which the attorneys here have gotten up in court and stated was a political move. Many of the greatest wrongs in the world have been righted by political moves, and it seems to the court that this has been treated too much as a joke, and with much levity."

"I look upon it as a fraud and a joke—absolutely nothing to it—made for political purposes and prosecuted for political purposes," interposed Fulton.

"The court has held that this is a serious case."

"I have had and still entertain the most profound respect for the court, and for the opinion of the court, but I have no respect for the cause of action," replied Fulton. "But for your honor, and for your honor's opinion, I think the court will justify me when I say I have the utmost respect for it, and I do not believe that in Oregon there is a more upright, judicious officer. But I can say that the cause of action was conceived in iniquity and brought forth in fraud; I can say it was concocted in some back chamber and brought here for political purposes. If these people had wanted Mr. Dunbar here they could have sent for him, or if they had requested that I produce Dunbar he would have been here. We have not run away from this case, we have nothing to hide, and feel that we are perfectly capable of taking care of our own case."

After Mr. Fulton left the stand the court said:

"Certainly your testimony is very candid, and there can be no fault attached to counsel for not producing those memorandum books, which, so far as you know, he has destroyed. Those memorandum books were kept during all of this time, and the fault, if any, lies with the defendant; and the court is certainly of the opinion that this order should be granted, and wants to assure counsel for the plaintiff that all the powers of the court will be exerted, no matter to what extent, to bring those books into court, or place upon the record intelligently the contents of those books. It is the firm belief of the court that it is the duty of the court, and it will enforce all the powers at its command, and it will grant this order now."

"Then the court finds that the books are in his possession as against our affidavit?" asked Fulton.

"Unless the counsel for the defendant saw those books destroyed it is only an opinion, which comes second-hand from the defendant. Mr. Dunbar was not under oath when he told counsel, and the court does not know whether those books were destroyed or not. The court does not doubt but what the counsel believes that the books were destroyed, but the court has grave doubts that the books were destroyed. The court, from its personal acquaintance, thinks Mr. Dunbar is too intelligent a man to destroy such books as that, and the court will be pained to know that he would take those steps to cover up transactions in a public office."

Postponed Till Afternoon.

The Dunbar case was resumed this afternoon at 1 o'clock, instead of at 9 o'clock this morning, owing to the inability of Attorney Fulton to return from Portland with the affidavit of Dunbar. This affidavit was filed with the court this afternoon, and consisted of about the same substance as that contained in the one filed by Fulton yesterday, in which it was claimed that the fee record books had been destroyed.

The continuance of the case until this afternoon was decided upon at a chance meeting of Judge Galloway and Fulton in Portland last night, both of whom thought they would not be able to return in time for the morning session. Judge Galloway, however, went to a Democratic meeting at Oregon City, and returned with Governor Chamberlain and others at 2 o'clock this morning.
