NATIONAL RIVERS.

Washington, April 11.—One of the most striking changes in congress, and it is more apparent in the sixtieth congress than in any of its predecessors, is the manner in which the appropriation bills are considered and framed. There is no hint of the old "log rolling" of other days. No measure now can be designated as the "pork barrel." The day when public money was voted for private advancement has passed.

In none of the appropriation bills is this more evident than in the rivers and harbors measure. It is true there will be no bill of this kind at this session, although a strong fight will be made for a liberal appropriation when congress reconvenes after the summer vacation. But at the present time the members of the rivers and harbors committee are not idle. They are carefully considering the proposed expenditures to be made.

The work of this important committee has been lightened to a very great extent by the educational influence of the National Rivers and Harbors congress. This organization has adopted as its motto "A policy and Not a Project," and preaches the folly of the struggle of local interests to grasp the biggest plums. It believes in the government expending not less than $50,000,000 annually on the work of rivers and harbors development, but it refuses to say where this money shall be spent.

The lack of logic exhibited in the mad scramble for appropriations on the river and harbor bill is set forth in Senator Knox's recent speech in Pittsburg. Senator Knox said:

"No subject of national policy has been more distorted by partial views, more disfigured by misapprehension, or more dwarfed by the conflict of local interests than the governmental work of improving our harbors and waterways, and yet upon no other one factor does the future expansion of commerce so largely depend.

To one element the appropriations for that purpose appear but as a division of spoils. By each particular section its own improvements are regarded as legitimate national claims, while those of other sections may seem exaggerated and greedy.

"The stage has been reached when local jealousies should be cast aside, and these limited and partial views enlarged to the perception that whatever expenditure is necessary to bring to its utmost economic capacity every harbor capable of commercial utility and every river able to furnish a route for industrial or agricultural products and material, is the most remunerative investment that can be made with national funds."

The use of the words "investment" by Senator Knox is regarded by waterway enthusiasts as most happy. They have contended all ways that money expended in internal improvements is not wasted, as in building battleships or equipping armies, but will return high interest in the guise of lower freight rates and increased commerce.

The general subject of waterways improvements is receiving greater attention with every passing month. The bill providing for legislative sanction to the organization of the Inland Waterways Commission is already in the hands of congress, and its passage is expected. President Roosevelt is deeply interested in the matter of such improvements, and he is especially anxious that a board of trained men be created to give the problem the attention its importance to commerce demands.

"One Touch of Nature Makes the Whole World Kin."

When a rooster finds a big fat worm he calls all the hens in the farm yard to come and share it. A similar trait of human nature is to be observed when a man discovers something exceptionally good—he wants all his friends and neighbors to share the benefits of his discovery. This is the touch of nature that makes the whole world kin. This explains why people who have been cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy write letters to the manufacturers for publication, that others similarly ailing may also use it and obtain relief. Behind every one of these letters is a warm hearted wish of the writer to be of use to someone else. This remedy is for sale by Dr. Sine's drug store.
