session of public lands in Oregon through him.

McCornack gave a detailed account of his business relations with Hyde, declaring that he had looked after work incident to the taking out of land applications by Hyde's clients. He said he filed these application in the Oregon land office, making the first cash payment on them.

Further question revealed the fact that Hyde had accounts in McCornack's bank. An individual ledger introduced in evidence showed that at one time J. H. Schneider, under indictment on land fraud charges, while acting for Hyde, paid on deposit more than $22,000 which was used, according to the testimony, to reimburse McCornack for payments he made in purchase for the Cascade forest reserve land.

McCornack admitted that he practically acted as Hyde's agent for the filing of land grants. The witness identified a number of letters, one of which is alleged to have been written by Hyde. The letter was signed by Senator Perkins of California, and was sent to Hoke Smith, then secretary of the interior. The letter referred to the creation of more lieen lands in Oregon. It asked for legislation to this effect.

McCornack is the most important witness thus far examined by the prosecution. Through him the government has established a number of operations are occurring recently enough to prevent Hyde from taking refuge under the statute of limitations.
