It is the proud boast that the American union is "an asylum for the oppressed of all nations." Are the states constituting the Union included? many citizens seem inclined to ask.

Wireless Telegraphy Indoors.

The transmitter is very simple and consists of a small induction coil made in the usual manner. A core consisting of a large number of iron wires is surrounded with glass or other insulating material, and over this are wound a few turns of No. 16 insulated copper wire. The secondary consists of many turns of No. 36 wire, wound over and insulated from the primary. The end of the secondary are connected to two small brass balls separated a very short distance from each other. When the current is broken in the primary a spark occurs at this gap. An automatic break may be used in the primary, or the current may be broken by hand. In both cases a condenser or Leyden jar should be bridged across the contact points. With such a coil, giving only one-eighth-inch spark, the author has obtained waves that could be detected in any part of the house. One side of the spark gap should be connected to a single short, bare wire, which will serve as the antenna or aerial. The other side should be connected to a gas or water pipe in the same room or near by. This will give a free path to the earth. The receiver also is very simple. The microphone detector gives very good results. This consists of two carbon plates, sharpened to a knife edge, with a fairly large needle resting on them. One side is connected to the antenna, and the other side should be grounded, as with the transmitter. In shunt with the detector is a battery and a telephone receiver. A rheostat should be used to regulate the current. This comprises the apparatus. The transmitter may be in one room and the receiver in the other, but a small spark at the transmitter will give out waves that will traverse the needle, causing it to cohere for an instant with the carbon and thereby producing a click in the telephone receiver. In this way messages may be sent all over the house, and the amateur will find this a good starting point if he wishes to learn something about wireless.—J. H. Pentress in Electrician and Mechanic.

Drama by Film and Funnel.

It seems that the day may be near when the sound of the mummer shall be low and the grasshopper a burden in the fields of Theopis. For the "theatrum" which was a threat, has become a fact. It is possible to see and hear three grand operas and three Shakespearean plays, besides "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," by way of the moving picture screen and the gramophone. Not a tragedian in the land shall behold a synchronized "Hamlet" without agreeing that in the gross and scope of my opinion, This bodes some strange eruption to our state. Under the scheme of mechanical stage performances, tonsillitis and the stellar system, with its exclusive salaries, may vanish from the list of managers' plagues. A gramophonetransmitter does not have a climatic throat, and the disk record of a voice once made is an inexpensive joy forever. Besides the "theatrum" can never balk visibly at being billed for an extra matinee. But, can the requisite thrill be transmitted across the footlights if the galleries must realize that Desdemona is in danger equally from Othello's wrath and a flaw in the film? Shall not "A Midsummer Night's Dream" merge into a nightmare of apprehension if the continuity of Titania's bright spirit is to hang upon the faithfulness of the calcium-light machine? In the drama which holds and delights our senses The lunatic, the lover and the poet Are of imagination all compact.
