THE WOMAN'S FLOWER GARDEN

Because the flower garden occupies only a small amount of space, as a general thing, most amateurs belittle the importance of doing thorough work in it, and it receives only a fraction of the attention it ought to get.

This is all wrong. Whether gardening is conducted on a small or an elaborate scale, it ought to be done well. It must be done well if success is to reward our efforts to grow vegetables or flowers in a satisfactory manner.

There is nothing difficult about gardening if one goes at it in the right manner. It is a perfectly simple process. The amateur wants to get the idea out of his mind that there is a "knack" about it. All there is to do is to prepare the soil for the reception of the seed or plant and see that it kept in the proper condition for plant development during the season.

Most flower gardens are so small that spading will take the place of plowing in them. This is really the most satisfactory method of turning up and pulverizing the soil, for the employment of a horse always results in more or less injury to the sward about the garden, and often to the shrubs and hardy plants growing near it. A man can spade up as much ground in two hours as the average woman will be able to take care of. If the man doesn't happen to be available a boy can generally be hired to do the work for a small sum.

The soil should be turned over to the depth of six or eight inches. Aim to bring the lower soil to the surface and bury that which most likely has the seeds of many weeds in it.

When the beds are spaded up apply fertilizer liberally. This must not be construed to mean excessive fertilizing. Too much manure will result in a luxuriant growth of plants and few flowers. What is meant by "liberal" fertilizing is a sufficient amount to bring about a vigorous, healthy plant growth. Soils vary in different parts of the country, and a fertilizer that does good work in one place may be comparatively worthless in some other locality. Here is where the value of advice from some one familiar with the soil in your locality comes in play.

If such advice is not readily obtainable it will be safe to make use of bonemeal, as this fertilizer almost always brings about good results on nearly all kinds of soil. If your garden seems to be of ordinary richness a teaspoonful of bonemeal to a yard square of surface will be ample. If it is very poor use a teaspoonful and a half. Scatter this over the soil as turned up from the spade and then go to work with hoe and iron rake to make that soil as fine as possible. There is no danger of overdoing this part of the work.

Do not be in too great a hurry to get this work done. Wait until the early spring rains have drained away before you begin to make your garden. The ground should be dry enough to crumble under the hoe or rake. If so moist that it sticks to them wait a while longer. Most persons are impatient of delay, and many of them put seed into the ground before it is safe to do so. Nothing is gained by too early sowing, and often all is lost by it. Unless the soil is rid of surplus water and has become partially warmed by the sunshine of settled weather fine seed will almost always fail to germinate. Even if one's seedlings from early sowing withstand the effects of too much moisture in the soil and the "cold spells" which we of the northwest are likely to experience till well along in May, these plants almost always are later in development than those of later sowing, because their experience with unfavorable conditions has given them a check from which it takes them some time to recover. This explains why it is not advisable to put seed into the ground until the warm weather is assured.

I would not advise sowing seed in the beds where plants are to blossom. I would make a bed for seedlings, from which they could be transplanted later on. This because such a bed need not occupy much room, as the seed can be sown in rows close together, and the work of weeding will be reduced to a minimum. Concentrate your attention on the seed bed, therefore as long as possible, and thereby save a good deal of work for yourself. Transplant your seedlings when they have made a second or third pair of leaves. They will then be large enough to work among without danger of uprooting them with the weeds—a risk which one always runs when seed is sown direct. In the bed where the plants are to bloom, as it is often quite difficult to tell which is weed and which is not.

Transplanting should be done on a cloudy day if possible. If the weather is bright and warm do your transplanting after sundown. Lift the seedlings with some earth adhering to their roots, and be careful to disturb those roots as little as possible. Water them well immediately after planting. If the next day is sunny shade them. I make a good shade for newly set plants in this way: From thick brown paper I cut circular pieces ten or twelve inches across. Then I make a cut from the outer edge of the circle to its center. I fold the paper upon itself where this cut is made, making a sort of umbrella, and in and out through this fold I run a wire. This wire answers a double purpose: it holds the paper in its umbrella shape and it becomes a support for the shade when the lower end of it is thrust into the ground close to the plant. It will be understood, therefore, that this wire ought to be twelve or fourteen inches long and it should be large enough to hold the shade rigidly in place. Such a shade keeps the sunshine away from the plant and does not interfere with a free circulation of air about it.

Most persons have a dislike for pulling weeds by hand. Not much work of this kind need be done nowadays. There are several weed pullers on the market which simplify this part of gardening wonderfully, and do it expeditiously and really better than one can do it by hand. One called a weeding hook or claw, costing 10 or 15 cents, enables you to work close to a plant without running any risk of uprooting or disturbing it, and with it you can accomplish more in an hour than could be done in a day by hand weeding. It not only cleans the ground of weeds, but it stirs the soil to the depth of an inch or more. The other weeders sold by florists are modifications of this idea, and any of them will be found satisfactory.

Weeding should be begun early in the season. If this is done you get the start of the weeds, and you can keep them under control with but little trouble. But if you let them get the start of you they will be quite likely to keep it for the remainder of the season. Remember that flowers cannot be grown to satisfaction when weeds are allowed to dispute the ownership of territory with them. Weeds are aggressive, and they will have everything their own way after a little if you give them a chance. Keep them from developing seed this season, and next year there will be comparatively few of them to fight; but allow a few of them to perfect seed, and the garden will be well supplied with them. I have not advised the use of barnyard manure simply because it is almost sure to be filled with weed seeds, thus making a good deal more work necessary than when commercial fertilizers are used.

Do not waste time and energy on the making of "pattern" beds. Let your beds be simple in shape, and depend on the flowers you grow in them to make them attractive. An elaborately laid out bed may show its "pattern" at first, but as soon as the plants in it have begun to spread its outlines will be lost sight of, and no one will know that there ever was a "pattern" to it.

Senator Demands Inquiry.

Washington, May 11.—Carrying out the threat made by him a week ago, Senator Raynor of Maryland today introduced in the senate a resolution asking the President to appoint a court of inquiry in the case of Colonel W. F. Stewart, who has been exiled to Fort Grant, Ariz.

Senator Raynor, at the time of his announcement of his intention to introduce the resolution, stated that he would give the President until today to order an inquiry. The President having failed to pay attention to the ultimatum, the resolution was accordingly introduced. Senator Raynor takes the ground that the President has no right to punish an army officer, that power resting solely with a regularly appointed court-martial.

Tornado Damages a State.

Woodward, Okla., May 11.—Leveling everything in its path, a tornado of unusual violence, swept over a portion of the state today, causing heavy damage at Arnett, Vici, Cooley, Grand, Nashville, Mutual, Richmond and Cesto. Loss of life is reported, but this is not confirmed. A number of the towns visited by the tornado are off the railroads and only meager reports of the disaster have been received.

The district swept by the wind lies about 25 miles south of here. At Arnett one man is said to have been killed and at another point several persons are reported injured. The tornado passed over four counties and covered a distance 26 miles in length.

Deafness Cannot be Cured.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

SMALL INVESTORS ARE SHUT OUT OF EASTERN OREGON

(Pendleton Tribune.)

Here is another view of the industrial situation in eastern Oregon which suggests what The Tribune has advised, "that the first thing to do is to show the small investor that we have something for him."

We need, first, more small concerns which will afford payrolls and larger ones as well. We need our woolen mill rehabilitated and put on its feet in a way that will make a permanent feature of Pendleton's business life. The time will come when we will have smaller farms in this vicinity also, and the two working together will guarantee us that supremacy to which our position entitles us.

Commenting on the situation, the Baker City Herald says: "Tom Richardson made a speech in Baker City last Friday night, but he did not start any booster fund. He did not try it, for it is presumed that the Portland man had been informed how lately Baker City merchants had been subscribing very liberally to everything that came along, and the milking process had become tiresome. We went from here to Pendleton, held a big booster meeting and closed with an appeal for subscriptions to a booster fund, but the response was not sufficient to interest anyone, and it is reported he gave up in sheer disgust.

"Don't get blue simply because Mr. Richardson failed to arouse the proper enthusiasm, and don't get blue because no booster advertising man is to be employed in either of the eastern Oregon cities. People who do business in Baker City and Pendleton have had some valuable experience. They are not mossbacks. Does Baker City look like a mossback town? Did you ever see a town lighted as this city is that smacked of mossbackism? Not on your life!

"Then have faith in your community. Because business men did not take to Mr. Richardson's idea of doing things is no reason why Baker City is hopelessly lost and will cease to have a place on the map.

"All agree that more people are needed here to develop this country, but the first thing to do is to show the small investor that you have something for him. In doing this you have taken the first step which, when followed by judicious advertising, will bring the right kind of people.

"Results are what count, and it is not always the brass band hurrah that gets the best results."

A Californian's Luck.

"The luckiest day of my life was when I bought a box of Bucklen's Arnica Salve," writes Charles F. Budahn, of Tracy, California. "Two 25c boxes cured me of an annoying case of itching piles, which had troubled me for years and that yielded to no other treatment." Sold unguaranteed at J. C. Perry's drug store.

ONE LESS NOMINEE

ory Taft scored in Kentucky has convinced himself and his friends that it would be a waste of time to continue the fight for delegates. For more than a week the Fairbanks men have not been active. Aside from hanging from headquarters in Chicago they have done nothing that could be noticed. Even the plan to send lieutenants to other states to confer with delegates seems to have been abandoned.

Fairbank's name will not be presented to the convention unless radical changes are made between now and the time the big gathering is called to order. It is not unlikely that the 30 Indiana delegates pledged to Fairbanks will go to Taft should the vice president withdraw.

NO STUMP SPEAKING FOR ALICE

(United Press Leased Wire.) Bellefontaine, O., May 11.—At the urgent request of her father, President Roosevelt, Mrs. Alice Roosevelt-Longworth has changed her mind about stumping the Eighth Ohio congressional district, where an election will be held this fall.

In August the Countess of Warwick will address a mass meeting of 15,000 negroes in the Eighth district where she will endeavor to debate with the Countess on the stump.

Murderer to Hang.

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Butte, Mont., May 11.—After pleading with the trial judge to hang him and to set the date of execution as early as possible, George Rook, the convict who pleaded guilty to murdering Warden George Robinson in a recent prison outbreak, heard the death sentence passed upon him smiling, then he laughed outright. Rook will hang July 1. Rook declared that prison life was such a horror to him that death in any form was vastly preferable.
