

GREATER ARMY AND NAVY ROOSEVELT PLANS

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Washington, May 19.—Adequate military and naval protection for the Pacific coast.

This will be one of the planks of the next Republican national platform, if Theodore Roosevelt has anything to say about it. And those who have been watching the trend of events are pretty sure that Roosevelt will get into that platform just about what he wants.

The President is more than merely in sympathy with the demand for the far west that proper facilities for defense be afforded the Pacific seaboard. He is insistent upon the matter, as a national policy. He believes that just as much consideration should be given to the proper protection of the Pacific coast as the Atlantic. He regards the interests of Oregon, Washington and California as emphatically the interests of the whole Union, just as much as are those of Maine and New York.

He would like to see every sea port on the Pacific made impregnable. He would like to have the western coast amply provided with navy yards and docking facilities for our big warships. So long as he is President, he will keep plugging away at congress for legislation in this direction.

More than that, he hopes that eventually the United States will have a navy large enough to be able to protect either or both coasts from attack by a hostile fleet. Considering the present size of the navy, it would have to operate as a snail against a formidable foe. Were it on the Atlantic when an attack should be made on the Pacific coast, great damage would be wrought before the fleet could reach the scene—unless congress by that time should have carried out his recommendations as to adequate fortifications. With a navy enlarged to the size he wishes, a fleet could be kept on each coast for such an emergency.

Until the day of the greater American navy, it is the belief of the President that the fleet should be shifted between the two oceans every year or two, and be kept at the highest point of efficiency for any eventuality.

These sentiments, the President feels, should be incorporated in the Chicago platform. In this policy he will have the enthusiastic support of the delegations from the far west, whether they be pro-Roosevelt or anti-Roosevelt, pro-Taft or anti-Taft.

Moreover, the President will endeavor to pledge the party to the promise made by some of the senate leaders when the naval appropriation bill was under discussion recently. He had insisted on a program of four battleships every year. The house balked, and so did the senate. The President fought harder than he has ever done for any of his pet policies. He not only sent a special message, but he wrote letters to the big men in congress and summoned them to the White House. The result was that he snatched victory from apparent defeat. He really had not expected more than two battleships to be provided for this year. He got the appropriations for these and the promise that congress would provide for two more each year for the next ten years. Now he wants to make that promise binding upon his party as a national policy.

BIG CITY MAY HAVE TO BOND

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Pittsburg, Penn., May 19.—Following the closing of the Allegheny National bank by the comptroller of the currency the announcement is made today that Pittsburg's administration is face to face with the possibility of being compelled to issue bonds, as $1,500,000 of the city's funds are tied up in the tangled affairs of the institution.

The city finds itself without available funds to meet current expenses, and the officials must take action at once to relieve the situation. State funds amounting to $500,000 are also tied up in the bank, but this money is secured by bonding companies. The speculations of Cashier Montgomery are officially placed at $594,490 though the bank's total shortage in cash is $2,000,000. Montgomery has been held to the grand jury.

PROHIS AND SALOONMEN ARGUE CASE

The question of whether Sublimity and Jefferson shall vote alone on local option, or whether they shall vote in conjunction with five other precincts is being argued this afternoon before Judge Galloway.

Saturday the wet contingent of the two precincts, whose petition was thrown out in favor of the dry petition by the county court last week, secured a writ of review from Judge Galloway, who will determine whether or not the action of Judge Scott was just.

M. J. Spaniol, one of the 80 signers of the wet petition, is the plaintiff in the case, and County Judge J. H. Scott, County Clerk R. D. Allen, and District Attorney C. L. McNary are the defendants. McNary is handling the case for the defendants and Carson and Brown are the attorneys for the plaintiff.

The principal complaint in the petition for the writ is, that the wet petition, which was passed up by the county commissioners' court, had complied with all the requirements of the law and that it was the first local option petition from Jefferson and Sublimity, the petition of the Prohibitionists having been filed several weeks later.

A similar case has never come before an Oregon court for decision, and there was no precedent for Judge Scott to follow. In giving his opinion he said that in deciding for the petition from the seven precincts instead of the one from the two precincts, he was serving a larger number of people. The decision therefore does not fix any law, and if in the opinion of Judge Galloway the decision of the county commissioners' court was wrong it can easily be reversed.

PULL CANNON OFF STATE GROUNDS

Take It Over To Willamette University and Make Babies' Toy of It.

One of the brass cannons, which have been used to decorate the Capitol building grounds, has been dragged by persons first over in front of the main building of the Willamette university and tied to a tree; then dragged up the steps of the liberal arts building, where it was switched around and pointed toward the Capitol building; next it was pulled down the stairs of the liberal arts building, trundled over to the Theological school, jerked up the stairs and pointed into the front door of the building, where it has remained, though it is possible it may next be seen pointing down one of the chimneys of one of the university buildings, or possibly suspended on the flag pole, if in the meantime some enthusiasts don't enjoy themselves a little more by throwing it from the top of one of the buildings in emulation of the proverbial "hurled from the battlements"—for all the respect some have for the state's property.

PLANNING CELEBRATION FOR FOURTH

It is now a settled fact that Salem is to have a strenuous Fourth of July celebration in this year of our Lord, 1908. This matter was arranged at the last regular meeting of the Board of Trade and since then President Albert has appointed the following general committee to have the matter in charge: August Huckestein, H. D. Patton, D. A. Dinsmoor, Z. J. R'gers, E. T. Barnes, F. A. Kurtz, M. O. Buren, D. H. James, H. W. Meyers, G. F. Rodgers, Paul Hauser, R. K. Page, I. Greenbaum, R. C. Bishop, Watt Shipp and D. R. Yantis.

These gentlemen will meet sometime in the near future and organize for the campaign. It will be necessary to select a chairman, secretary and treasurer, as well as to appoint sub-committees to look after the details of the work. The expressed opinion is that Salem will this day have one of the most striking demonstrations in honor of our natal day that has ever been known in the history of our city. Certainly a good committee has been named to start the matter off and it is not expected too much to look forward to this year's celebration as a landmark among such events in Salem.

It will go down in history how Hal D. Patton shook his way into the house of representatives with his hand-shaking campaign.

Utilization of Tidal Power.
Almost simultaneously experiments have been made at Hamburg and in Italy for deciding the question whether the movements on the surface of the sea could not on a large scale be fructified as sources of power for electrical works. The German engineer Herr Pein has just founded a limited company called "Wasserkraft Anlagen" (Waterpower installations) at Hamburg with a view of using the regular coming and going out of the tides as moving power. At the beach near Groden at the mouth of the Elbe river works are in the course of construction that will supply the necessary power for the electric light of that place and Cuxhaven and for the electric tramway as well. The patents taken out in the course of his experiments are based on a principle that it is said will allow the delivery of electric current considerably below the current rates. This system derives its principal advantage from the regular reiteration of the motions used; but it can, of course, be applied only on spots where as strong tides are available as in the German ocean.

For fructifying the irregular movements of the sea water, the waves, an Italian major of the general staff of the army, Signore Ravelli, has invented an apparatus to which he has given the name of "Maremotore." After testing it on the coast of Liguria, where there are no tides, he took his patents out in all the countries of Europe and America. His apparatus consists of an inclined plane with rails stretching well into the deep sea. Carts that move on these rails are to be lifted up by the pressure of the waves and to fall again by their own weight. Thereby pumps are set in motion accumulating water that by its overflow will supply the moving power for electrical or compressed air machines. Another method of utilizing the waves has been already in practical use (in a small way) for about seven years. But moored boats were used as receivers of the wave pressure.

The idea is in fact already thirty years old, for it was in 1878 that the German engineer Plessner got his English patent. But it was not improved and successfully applied until the beginning of our century by the American Mr. Wright and the German Herr Gehre. Wright built three enormous floats and put them on the sea of the California coast; by levers their motions were transferred to pumps that filled a basin made of steel plates, whence under pressure the accumulated water was led to some turbines in connection with a dynamo machine of nine horsepower. More than a mere experiment was Herr Gehre's "luminous buoy" as used for the last few years with great success near the mouth of the Elbe river at Busum. A bright light is automatically produced at short intervals and at the same time bells are set ringing. Even the slightest ripple of the sea is sufficient for setting the buoy at work.

If these experiments on a large scale now proceeded with in Germany and Italy should prove successful our anxieties about distant future when the present coalfields of Europe will be exhausted may permanently be set to rest.—Continental Correspondence.
