Saloon vs. Governor Hanly.

At the recent Republican state convention of Indiana Governor Hand delivered what is spoken of by press as one of the best political addresses ever made in this country. The platform adopted by this convention also declares unequivocally a county option law. We join with Indiana in an aggressive warfare upon the saloon. The following is that portion of Governor Hanly's speech touching the liquor traffic. It should be printed on cardboard and hung in windows of every public place in two states: Personally, I have seen so much of the evils of the traffic in the last few years, so much of its economic waste, so much of its physical ruin, so much of its mental blight, so much of its tears and heart-ache, I have come to regard the business as one that must be held and controlled by strong and effective laws. I hear no malice toward those engaged in the business, but I hate the traffic. I hate its every phase. I hate it for its hypocrisy. I hate its cant and craft and false promises. I hate it for its commercialism. I hate it for its greed and avarice. I hate it for its sordid love of gain at any price. I hate it for its domination in politics. I hate its corrupting influence in civic life. I hate it for its incessant effort to debauch the suffrage of the citizen; for the cowards it makes of public men. I hate it for its ruthless trampling of the solemn commands of state constitutions. I hate for the load it straps to labor's back; for the palsied hand it gives to its wounds to genius; for the tragedies of its might-have-beens. I hate it for the human wrecks it has caused. I hate it for the houses it peoples; for the prisons it fills; for the insanity it begets; for its countless graves in potter's fields. I hate it for the mental it imposes upon its victims; for its spiritual blight; for its moral degradation. I hate it for the crimes it has committed. I hate it for the lives it has destroyed. I hate it for the hearts it has broken. I hate for the mallee it has planted in the hearts of men—for its poison, for its bitterness—for the dead sea fruit which it starves their souls. I hate it for the grief it causes manhood—the scalding tears, the deferred, the strangled aspirations, its burden of want and care. I hate it for its heartless cruelty to the aged, the infirm and the helpless; for the shadow it throws upon the lives of children for its monstrous injustice to blameless little girls. I hate it as virtue hates vice, as truth hates error, as righteousness hates sin, as justice hates wrong, as liberty hates tyranny, as freedom hates oppression. I hate it as Abraham Lincoln hated slavery. And as he sometimes in prophetic vision the end of the weary and the coming of the time when the sun should shine and the shadow should fall upon no slave in all the republic, so I sometimes seem to see the end of this unholy traffic, the coming of the time when, if it is not wholly cease to be, it shall be no safe habitation anywhere beneath 'old Glory's' stainless stars.

REPUBLIC OF SIUSLAW.

An Independent Nation Seeks Relations with Japan.

J. H. Pratt, of Acme, is about to inaugurate a scheme that will put the Siuslaw country in touch with the commercial world. Mr. Pratt says that, through its isolation the Siuslaw can hardly be considered a portion of the United States and therefore steps will probably be taken at an early date to organize an independent republic with Florence or Acme as the seat of government, with O. W. Hurd as president, I. B. Cushman, of Acme, as vice-president, the cabinet to be selected from among the wise men of that section. Mr. Pratt has already been asked to go to Japan as ambassador or minister plenipotentiary, there to establish trade relations with the country that seems to be nearest Siuslaw from a commercial point of view. Mr. Pratt thinks that to thus establish friendly relations with the mikado would insure immunity to the entire coast from warlike attack from the little brown men. But all this joshing aside, the time has come when an electric road should penetrate that section of Lane county which is so rich in resources, but which cannot reap the profits its industry warrants, nor reach the high state of development for which it is capable for lack of transportation facilities. The projected electric lines through this valley cannot afford to overlook the Siuslaw.

TEACHERS ARE ARGUED TO ATTEND

State Superintendent J. H. Ackerman has issued the following letter to the teachers of Oregon, calling attention to the convention of the National Teachers' association at Cleveland. The state school officials are also desirous of having as many Oregon people as possible outside of the teaching profession, take advantage of the low rates to attend the convention at Cleveland: May 11, 1908.—To Oregon teachers:—The National Educational association will hold its next session at Cleveland, Ohio, June 29 to July 2, inclusive, and a goodly attendance from Oregon is desired. Rates to said meeting are as follows: First.—From all O. R. & N. points, the round trip fare to Chicago, selling dates, June 19 and 20, will be $72.50. Second.—From points on the S. P. Oregon lines, the rates will vary according to the distance the starting point is from Portland. Third.—Tickets from both O. R. & N. and S. P. territory will carry a going limit of ten days with a final return limit of 90 days, and include stop over privileges in both directions within the limits. Fourth.—It has not yet been decided just what the fare will be from Chicago to Cleveland and return, but probably will not exceed $9.00 for the round trip. For further information inquire of your local ticket agent.

RUSSIA PERSIA AT OUTS

WAR IS PROBABLE

(United Press Leased Wire.) St. Petersburg, May 20.—Persia's accusation that Russia started the raiding, massacres and warfare along the Russo-Persian frontier threatens grave trouble. The violent tone assumed by the Persian charge d'affaires here in airing his country's grievances, the fact that such border troubles are almost chronic, that the latest outbreak is still unsettled and the practical certainty that the sultan will try to break into the controversy greatly increases the already imminent danger of a clash between the three powers. The Persian version that fighting began with the killing of several Persians by Cossacks who had followed lost horses into Persian territory answered by the Russians with the assertion that the stock was stolen during a Persian raid. It is not denied that many Persians were killed and that eight villages were burned by the Russians during the ensuing campaign. The villagers, it is maintained, harbored bandits and fired on the Russians when the latter tried to seize them. Some women and children, it is admitted, were unavoidable slain. The sultan is expected ostensibly to take the Shah's part and movements of his troops are already reported alarmingly suggestive of the throwing of a strong body into Persia. If permitted, Russia is sure such a move would mean a permanent occupation of much Persian territory. Naval Movements and the Wireless. There has just been installed on the new admiralty buildings in London a set of wireless telegraphy apparatus, and the innovation is causing more than a little misgiving among naval officers afloat. So far as it will facilitate the interchange of information and the sending of important news, the erection of the station is welcomed, but there is a strong fear that advantage will be taken of it to interfere with the independent action of fleet commanders in the event of war. Even in the days of sailing ships this interference was a source of much confusion and ill-feeling, and then, of course, orders from London had to be sent by the slow process of a dispatch vessel. The temptation will be much greater with a wireless apparatus close at hand. The danger, too, is especially great today, when practically the whole administration of the navy has been put into the hands of one man, to whom the temptation afforded by the Marconi apparatus to take over from the direction of warlike operations from an armchair in Whitehall would probably be too strong to be resisted. An Express representative has succeeded in obtaining the views of two officers holding fleet commands. They are both emphatic in condemning it. "The officer who is placed in command of a war fleet for war purposes," writes one, "should be left to execute his commission to 'sink, burn or destroy,' according to his own lights. He must necessarily be better able to appreciate all the conditions than a man in London, who, however great his ability, sinks, from his very position, to the status of an armchair critic. Personally, if the nation saw fit to intrust me with the command of its fleet in war I should keep my receivers open to all information and closed to all advice and orders. Wireless telegraphy makes the use of Nelson's famous 'blind eye' of Copenhagen a very simple matter." "The paramount necessity in the next naval war will be rapidity of thought and of execution," adds the other officer. "It is the same now as it was a hundred years ago. No British admiral can do wrong if he finds the enemy and fights him, and the only excuse for interference from London would be the communication which would help him to that end."—London Express.
