ANOTHER HAS GOOD OPINION OF U. S.

When Minister Gude, Norway's new ambassador to the United States came to Chicago last week accompanied by his wife, the maid carried an inevitable violin. The new minister from Norway is a violinist and lover of music. "I play only a little," he explained to an interviewer, "but my wife, she is a violinist," and he turned with a deferential gesture of pride to the woman at his side, whose head scarcely reached to his sturdy shoulders. "While I was an attache at the legation in Paris, as a young man, I studied at the Conservatory, where I met many Americans who afterward became some of the best musicians in Europe."

The new minister was on his way to Minneapolis, where he was scheduled to appear in the celebration of the Norwegian national holiday.

He expressed an intense interest in seeing the western country and visiting the Norwegian farms of the northwest.

"There are about a million Norwegians in America," he explained, "and in the fatherland the young men think of America as a golden land of promise. The great opportunities in Norway for the young man are in fishing, farming or mining. Often there are too many sons in the family for the small farm, and so they come to America, which they love, for they all have brothers or friends here."

Mr. Gude likes America and the people he has met. As he puts it: "You Americans are the most ambitious people in the world. I passed through the country in 1897 on the way to Japan and was then most favorably impressed, and my impressions have been strengthened since our stay in Washington. Diplomats love all countries, of course, after being stationed in any one, but we have been surprised and very much pleased with the unusual hospitality and cordiality of the people in Washington, from the President down."

Kenedy's Laxative Cough Syrup does not constipate, but on the other hand its laxative principles gently move the bowels. Children like it. Sold by all druggists.
