ROOSEVELT NARROWLY ESCAPED FROM BEING KILLED

(United Press Special Wire) Washington, June 2.—It has become known here that President Roosevelt was thrown from a horse and barely escaped death yesterday afternoon in Rock Creek park where he was trying the special animal in going over a water jump. The President saved his life by jumping quickly to one side as the horse and sustained severe bruises and badly crushed.

The President when he came out today, said: "I didn't amount to much and it's worth printing. I am not taking all seriously."

The horse became frightened and approached the jump. It reared and fell violently. He turned suddenly in the saddle and was thrown to the water.

The horse jumped to his feet in great fright. It dashed over a breakneck speed but Sergeant Dermott, the orderly for whom the President was trying the animal, succeeded in capturing it and drove it to the place where the President fell.

The President mounted the animal again, saying his injuries were of no consequence, where he rode the animal half an hour toward and went through another performance almost as dangerous as the first.

The horse was very nervous after the fall and as the President was trying to get to a place where it was necessary to cross a stream, the horse went into the water of the creek but when it felt the cold water, it shied and gave a sudden jump.

Roosevelt leaned forward with his head almost beside that of the horse. The animal staggered at the rough bottom of the creek and fell at its full length in the water, carrying the President down with it. Roosevelt released his feet from the stirrups and sprang from the saddle, landing in the creek and was hurt.

Mississippi Flood (United Press Special Wire) St. Louis, Mo., June 2.—The Mississippi river above Cairo, Ill., is rapidly rising and hundreds of homes have already been washed in that vicinity. Great damage to property is reported, but a few deaths are known to have occurred.

COMMITTS SUICIDE

shot pierced his brain, and he died instantly.

The sad accident happened at the Thompson home at 1063 Oak street. Mr. Thompson's niece, Mrs. Spelcer, went to the meat market nearby a few minutes after 10 o'clock, leaving her sister, Mrs. Winter, at home with her uncle. After waiting a few minutes Mrs. Winter became surprised at the stillness, as she knew that Mr. Thompson was in the house, and that it was not his habit to remain quiet for a very long period. She accordingly made a search, and not finding him upstairs, went into the basement, where Mr. Thompson sometimes passed the time.

In the basement she detected the smell of burnt powder, and going in to the contained above in the front of the basement she found the dead body of the pioneer lying on the floor, with the gun grasped in both hands. In all probability death had been instant.

Within the last year Mr. Thompson has become quite childish, and for several years he has been wishing and expecting to die. Mr. Spelcer said that he had expressed the wish to die on his eighty-second birthday, which occurred last month, and that since that time he had frequently talked of suicide. As the old gentleman was of a jovial disposition, however, these remarks were not taken seriously, although a revolver that had been in the house was quietly hid from him.

Whether Mr. Thompson had been contemplating suicide for a very long time is not known. He has told many of his friends that he did not expect to live long, and had even made arrangements with Mr. Clough to have his body cremated. He has also inquired lately about the effect of morphine and other poisons. All these things, however, were taken as natural peculiarities of the aged man, and none of his relatives feared suicide.

James I. Thompson was born in Surry county, North Carolina, April 21, 1827. In 1862 he married Miss Elizabeth Dyer, who died in 1898. Six children were born, all of whom are now dead. He crossed the plains in 1852, coming first to California, where for many years he was engaged in mining. In 1860 he came to Oregon, and settled in Polk county, where he farmed until 1873. For two terms he was county clerk of Polk county. He then removed to Salem where he has since lived as a retired citizen.

Mr. Thompson is survived by general nieces and nephews living in different parts of the country; one of them is a resident of Salem. He was one of the best loved and respected of the old pioneers, and his death comes as a sad blow to the entire county.

members of the next legislature will be men pledged to Statement No. 3, providing that they obey the will of the people. Chamberlain now leads Calk by 1672 votes and is expected to make still greater gains when the three or four missing counties are heard from. With very few counties yet to make their returns, Chamberlain's vote in the state, including Multnomah county, is 38,789, while Calk has but 37,117.

Reflection of Chamberlain's election by the people when his name comes before the legislature assured. There are 90 members of the joint assembly, requiring 46 to elect. The election of 52 Statement No. 1 men gives the governor a safe majority of six votes.

Prohibition's worst fights in 19 counties, making 14 of them absolutely dry and crippling the wets materially in the remaining five. The wets report big victories in but three counties to the present time.

The counties which are absolutely dry, according to present figures, are Willamette, Morrow, Yamhill, Lane, Douglas, Polk, Union, Umatilla, Union, Clatsop, Curry, Gilliam, Sherman and Benton. In Crook county there is one wet precinct left, in Baker three precincts went dry, at St. Johns in Multnomah, three precincts went dry. Jackson county is dry except in one precinct, and in Josephine a similar condition prevails. Wasco, Clackamas and East Portland in Multnomah county were the scene of victories for the wets.

Prohibition lost out in Marion county by 519 votes with all precincts heard from with the exception of Monitor. Salem will continue wet, the voters deciding at Monday's election against prohibition by a majority vote of 61.

Probably the greatest plurality secured by any single candidate in this county for an office, was that secured by Wm. Bushy, candidate for county judge, who carried the county by more than 800 votes against his Democratic opponent, P. L. Frazier. Some of the other successful candidates are: Aitchison and Campbell for railroad commissioners; Walker, food and dairy commissioner; Bean, justice supreme court.

MARION COUNTY DRY

Notwithstanding many current reports that Marion county would remain wet it now appears that the county will go dry and Salem will have a few months of sun shine.
