STRIKE CLOSES SCHOOLS

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Vienna, June 4.—All the leading universities of Austria are closed today and most of the high schools have closed their doors as the result of a double strike of clerical and non-clerical students. Over 20,000 students have quit.

The trouble started over a speech of Dr. Wahrmond, professor of Catholic ecclesiastical law in the Innsbruck university in which the doctrines of the Roman Catholic church were severely criticised.

The clerical students rebelled at the institutions and they were closed. Then the non-clerical students walked out until Professor Wahrmond's academic freedom should be restored to him.

No Need of Suffering from Rheumatism.

It is a mistake to allow anyone to suffer from rheumatism, as the pain can always be relieved, and in most cases a cure effected by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. The relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. It makes sleep and rest possible. Even in cases of long standing this liniment should be used on account of the relief which it affords. Do not be discouraged until you have given it a trial. For sale by Dr. Stone's drug store.

"Trial marriages" and "trial separations" may never be sanctioned—but "trial homes" are already the rule with boarders and lodgers. And without the privilege of occasional change fewer people would choose this method of living.

Thinks It Saved His Life.

Lester M. Nelson, of Naples, Maine, says in a recent letter: "I have used Dr. King's New Discovery many years, for coughs and colds, and I think it saved my life. I have found it a reliable remedy for throat and lung complaints, and would not more be without a bottle than I would be without food." For nearly 40 years New Discovery has stood at the head of throat and lung remedies. As a preventive of pneumonia, and healer of weak lungs it has no equal. Sold under guarantee at J. C. Perry's drug store, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

FRENCH MARTYR

Alfred Dreyfus and fired point blank at him twice with a revolver.

Both balls took effect in the right arm of the man whose fame spread round the world when he was exiled for a treason charge, afterward disproved.

Major Dreyfus, though surprised by the sudden attack, uttered no cry or exclamation of any kind.

Gregory darted into the crowd in an attempt to make a hasty escape, but M. Moquin, head of the military police, was near at hand and pounced upon the fleeing editor.

The officer quickly subdued the prisoner; took his pistol and turned him over to a gendarme who hurried him away to jail.

The sensational affair took place near the close of the exercises in celebration of the transfer of the remains of Emile Zola, the famous novelist and defender of Dreyfus from Mont Marte cemetery to the Pantheon, the French hall of fame.

Tremendous crowds were present and trouble had been feared in advance because of the feeling revived by the remembrance of the Dreyfus case by which France was torn asunder.

After the shooting Dreyfus displayed the most remarkable presence of mind. He begged the people about him to be quiet and not to let it become generally known what had happened. He then walked unassisted to an automobile, which he entered and was rushed away to his home.

After an examination the surgeons announced that Dreyfus' injuries were not necessarily serious.

Gregory stood within three feet of President Fallieres. As a patriotic song was being sung, Fallieres, closely followed by Dreyfus and Minister Doumergue, started down the steps to review the parade.

As they passed the press table Gregory arose with the others and as Dreyfus approached, he exclaimed: "Here's for the parade."

Thereupon he stepped up to Dreyfus and fired. The coolness of Dreyfus and the president alone could have saved a disastrous scene. All the officials deserve great credit, including United States Ambassador White, who calmly walked on and reviewed the parade, showing no signs that he knew anything had happened, though he was nearby when the shots were fired.

It was a few minutes before the general crowd learned of the attack on Dreyfus. Then there was wild excitement. A mob set out to overtake the gendarmes in charge of Gregory. A fight followed in which Gregory sustained several slight cuts from the sabres in the hands of the gendarmes. The crowd fell upon Gregory with great violence in spite of the efforts of the officers and he was badly beaten before he reached the police station.

As military editor of his journal Gregory was brought in close touch with all the affairs of the army and followed the Dreyfus case carefully from the beginning to the end. His sympathies were all against Dreyfus and his hatred was particularly strong against Zola for his defense of the soldier. He considered the transfer of Zola's body to the Pantheon to be a sacrilege and had openly denounced the government officials for permitting it. He was looked upon as being almost fanatical in his views. His paper yesterday printed a bitter article in which it was charged that the Pantheon was being turned into a sewer by putting the body of Zola there.

The exercises began at 9:30 this morning. After the singing of the Marseilles, Minister Doumergue delivered an address in which he praised Zola and eulogized him as one of the great thinkers of France. He lauded his literary and political career and said his body had been given its rightful honor. I have mixed with the crowd and I find that the general temper is good and the persons of various classes with whom I talked appeared to be inclined toward pleasure and celebration rather than mischief.

Editor Gregory when questioned by the police said: "I did not fire at Dreyfus; I fired at Dreyfusism. It is revolting to see the noble army of France mixed in an affair of this sort which at best concerned only the government and the Dreyfus family."

Dr. Pourzi, who attended Dreyfus at his home, announced this afternoon that the first bullet grazed the arm and failed to do any serious injury. The second penetrated the forearm deeply, a few inches above the wrist but did not touch the bone. He said his patient was quiet, had no fever, and was in no danger.

The procession strung out for a mile, beating tin pans, crosscut saws, and anything that would make a noise. The boys sang college songs and painted the town red, as the saying is.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 4.—C. W. Averill, of this city, left today for Bath, Me., to take the necessary steps toward gaining possession of an estate valued at $10,000,000 left him by his aunt, Mrs. Mattie Sewell.

Averill is a retired lumber merchant and has been in modest circumstances all his life. He said today that he would take a trip to Europe with some of the money and spend the rest making mankind happy. He has figured out that he can help at least 20,000 persons with the money.

The rich man is a widower, and with the exception of a married daughter, has no relatives. The fortune was made in the monster shipbuilding works at Bath.
