-SMILES-

A berry grower advertises in this paper for pickers, and offers good camp grounds and good water. The custom of families going out and picking berries as they go out and pick hops is well established in some parts of Oregon and Washington and will be here as the berry crop grows larger. It will be an outing and a holiday at the most beautiful time of the year and then the family will earn some money besides. As the hop business is on the decline, why not make it a custom at Salem.

A word of caution to the ministers. You have hammered on Prohibition a great deal the past six months. We have had it in orthodox pulpits and at the special meetings and in the Sunday school and special meetings and in gold medal debates, and in the public schools and wherever two or three could be got together. Even Memorial Day and Lincoln's birthday have been desecrated with harangues on the horrors of drunkenness that would almost have made some of those old fellows ashamed of themselves if they could have heard it, for they were good men and true in their time if they did take a little toddy. By all means let us be good and moral and virtuous but don't make us all tired of it.

The Best Pills Ever Sold.

"After doctoring 15 years for chronic indigestion, and spending over two hundred dollars, nothing has done me as much good as Dr. King's New Life Pills. I consider them the best pills ever sold," writes B. F. Ayscough, of Ingleside, N. C. Sold under guarantee at J. C. Perry's drug store. 25c.

Visiting Old Home—

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Long, of The Dalles, have been visiting Mrs. Margaret Belle, on North Summer street, mother of Mrs. Long. Mr. Long was for nine years principal of the Grant school and Central school of this city and has for the past six years been a clerk in the land office at The Dalles.

No Need of Suffering from Rheumatism.

It is a mistake to allow anyone to suffer from rheumatism, as the pain can always be relieved, and in most cases a cure effected by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. The relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. It makes sleep and rest possible. Even in cases of long standing this liniment should be used on account of the relief which it affords. Do not be discouraged until you have given it a trial. For sale by Dr. Stone's drug store.

RESOLUTIONS BY

SEDGWICK POST

Veterans Grateful for Courtesies and Aid Extended on Memorial Day.

At a regular meeting of Sedgwick Post No. 10, G. A. R., held on Tuesday night last it was Resolved, That the thanks of this Post and of the W. R. C. are due and are hereby tendered to the people of Salem who so willingly and so cheerfully contributed of their substance, time and influence in aid of our observance of memorial day, and especially to courtesies extended by the Portland Railway, Light & Power company for the transportation so generously furnished the veterans and the ladies; to L. C. Stringer the favor showed by his reading of Lincoln's Gettysburg address; to Mrs. Penn for the splendid recitation given at the cemetery; to the press of the city for the many favors extended by it; to the officers and members of Company M, O. N. G., for their attendance and participation in the exercises; to the eight little boys who represented the U. S. navy; to the children who assisted the W. R. C. in their services; to W. E. McElroy and the members of his band for the music furnished by them, and particularly because of the time to which it was executed thereby enabling the veterans to keep step without becoming "winded" in the first measure, and lastly to Aug. Huckenstein and E. H. Anderson of the board of trade committee for their assistance to the G. A. R. committee in completing arrangements for the exercises of the day.

Resolved, That these resolutions be furnished to the city press for their use.

You Never Can Tell.

Just exactly the cause of your rheumatism, but you know you have it. Do you know that Ballard's Snow Liniment will cure it?—relieves the swelling and limbers the joints and muscles so that you will be as active and well as you ever were. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by all dealers.

How Property Advances—

Mr. N. N. Lunde bought ten acres of land about four miles from Salem on the Garden road a few years ago for $90 per acre. He has put part of it in orchard, has put some improvements on it and today it is worth $3000. He has been offered that for it several times. He also owns 80 acres one and a-half miles from Falls City where his son N. N. Lunde, has a blacksmith business.

Poison Oak Poisoning.

Ballard's Snow Liniment cures it. Mr. O. H. P. Cornelius, Turner, Ore., writes—My wife has discovered that Snow Liniment cures "Poison Oak Poisoning," a very painful trouble. She not only cured a case of it on herself, but on two of her friends who were poisoned by this same ivy. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00.

Graduating Exercises—

The Willamette graduates of the college of oratory held their closing exercises in the M. E. church last night. The presenting of diplomas will take place Monday evening.

The Big Head.

Is of two kinds—conceit and the big head that comes from a sick headache. Does your head ever feel like a gourd and your brain feel loose and sore? You can cure it in no time by acting on your liver with Ballard's Herbine. Isn't it worth trying for the absolute and certain relief you'll get? Sold by all dealers.

PRESIDENT AND VICE-PRESIDENT ASPIRANTS

Favorite Sons, and Others, Possibilities and Near Possibilities for the Republican Nominations for President and Vice-President—Their Personalities and Achievements—Written by Staff Representatives of the United Press Who Are Personally Acquainted with the Subjects.

Washington, June 6.—Barely over five feet in height, Philander Chase Knox Senator from Pennsylvania and former Attorney General of the United States, is, physically speaking, the most diminutive candidate for the presidency the country has ever seen. But short as he is in stature, he is long in intellect.

There are other superlative adjectives that might be applied. For instance, he is the richest of all the Republican candidates, the dressiest, the most reserved and the sportiest. He owns some of the best blooded horses in America. He has earned the biggest fees for defending corporations, and he was the first Attorney General to find and make use of an effective weapon to prosecute them. He is also the baldest of all the candidates, and the only one that is smooth shaven.

Knox likes the company of young men. At his home almost every evening there is a pinochle or billiard game in progress in which the Senator and some youngsters of his acquaintance are the participants. When he finds a young man displaying marked ability in any line of work, he is very apt to extend a helping hand. It was thus that Milton D. Purdy, sometimes referred to as the "trust buster" of the administration came into notice. Knox met him when he was in Minnesota in connection with the Northern Securities case, when Purdy had just begun to climb the legal ladder. Knox was attracted to him and his work, and when the law was passed authorizing the Department of Justice to employ special assistant attorney generals, he sent for Purdy and gave him one of the jobs. That Purdy has made good is a tribute to Knox's discriminating judgment of men.

Knox is sensitive. Some years ago he entered at the New York horse show a pair of blooded horses that had pedigrees reaching back to the Dark Ages, and which to his mind as an expert, was the finest matched team of trotting horses in America. The prizes, however, went to horses of New York's social favorites and Knox pair received no mention. He has never exhibited there since.

He owes his prominence partly to the fact that he was once expelled from the West Virginia University for a boyish prank. One of the rules of the faculty was that no students should attend theatricals. One day a company playing "East Lynne" came along and Knox, together with about 20 fellow students, decided to see the performance. One of the professors, sent to take the names of the offenders, reported them, and all were sentenced to expulsion. Eighteen were reinstated on signing an agreement not to offend again, but Knox and one other left.

He then went to Mt. Union College, Alliance, Ohio, and it was there that he first met William McKinley, Jr. Undecided as to the profession he would adopt, it was entirely due to McKinley that he finally resolved to become a lawyer. But for that meeting, Knox might now be a bank cashier in a country town like his father.

A close student, especially of cases in which he was interested, and with a fine capacity of resolving abstruse statements of the law into concise and lucid language understandable even by laymen, Knox succeeded in his profession from the start. In the earlier days of Andrew Carnegie he became the ironmaster's lawyer and received, it is said an income of $50,000 a year from this source alone.

In the 20 years following his resignation in 1876 as assistant United States attorney for the western district of Pennsylvania, a place that he held for only one year, his personal retainers averages $90,000 a year. These, with his interest in the other business of his firm, gave him an income of about $150,000 a year, and he came to be recognized as one of the most successful corporation lawyers in the country. Incidentally he became a stock holder in the U. S. Steel corporation, the Union Trust Co., the Pittsburgh Bessemer and Lake Erie Railway Co., and other powerful corporations. His largest single fee was earned in a 45-minute speech in opposition to an attempt to abrogate the charter and limit the franchises of the Indianapolis Street Car company. He received $125,000 for that piece of work. His associate, the late ex-President Benjamin Harrison, addressed the court for four hours and received only $50,000.

It is related of Knox's early career that when he had a particularly puzzling question to elucidate, he would sally forth with a law book under one arm and fishing tackle under the other and hie him to some favorite stream. When he returned in the evening he generally had a string of fish and the solution of the problem as well.

Perhaps because he knew from the inside how the Federal laws were being violated, but more likely because he realized that the principal duty attached to his office was to prosecute such violations, Knox quickly became active in the enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust law, when McKinley appointed him attorney-general in 1901. He was firmly convinced that combinations that stifled competition and restrained interstate commerce were evil and after long and laborious effort, he got together the necessary evidence and sued the Northern Securities Co. He was upheld by the supreme court of the United States in his contention that this concern was an illegal combination.

He has consistently held that monopolies and combinations, particularly of railroads, tended surely towards government ownership of public utilities, and he set himself to combat that tendency by seeking to give the people relief under existing laws. He instituted proceedings against the Beef Trust, the Salt Trust, the Jacksonville Wholesale Grocers' association, the Cotton Traffic Pool, the Anthracite coal carrying roads, and many others, all involving alleged violations of the anti-trust and interstate commerce laws. It was on his recommendation that the law was passed permitting cases of general public importance to be expedited in the supreme court of the United States.

Knox owns three homes. One is a large and beautifully furnished stone house on Ellsworth avenue, Pittsburg, set in the midst of well-kept lawns. His Washington residence is on K street, was the former home of George W. Childs, and cost the senator $170,000. His country place is at Valley Forge, once part of the camping ground used by Gen. Washington, and the headquarters of Gen. Knox, the senator's illustrious revolutionary ancestor. Here he raises all kinds of fine stock.

As much of his time as is possible Knox spends in the open. He is fond of golf and plays a fair game. He likes to fish. But his chief delight in the way of sports is his horses. These he likes to drive himself, and other early risers may frequently see him speeding a pair of blooded roadsters through the crisp morning air along the picturesque roads of Rock Creek Park.

Without advertising the fact, Mr. Knox is a man of generous impulses. Following the great blizzard of 1896 in Western Pennsylvania, he was called upon by a representative of a charity organization for a contribution for coal and food. Knox handed her a check the size of which led the startled woman to inquire: "How do you wish this money to be applied, Mr. Knox?"

"As your organization thinks best," was the reply. "There are worthy or unworthy poor, I know, but they are all cold and hungry."

A Grand Family Medicine. "It gives me pleasure to speak a good word for Electric Bitters," writes Mr. Frank Conlan of No. 436 Houston St., New York. "It's a grand family medicine for dyspepsia and liver complications; while for lame back and weak kidneys it cannot be too highly recommended." Electric Bitters regulate the digestive functions purify the blood, and impart renewed vigor and vitality to the weak and debilitated of both sexes. Sold under guarantee at J. C. VOGET

BROTHERS BUILDERS

The firm of Voget Bros. have erected 45 dwellings in four years and are building many new ones this year. This is a fine record for one firm who are doing things to build up the city, and enable people of small means to get homes of their own. They have more applications than they can respond to, but have a number of new buildings under construction. They find many persons who have a few hundred dollars to pay down on a house but not enough to build. Others have a lot and can borrow part of the money required to put up a house. Then by paying about what rent would cost them the rest is easily paid on the installment plan. On this plan many people have been able to get their own homes who would otherwise be paying rent all their lives. On their plan $400 cash will secure as good a home as it would take $1000 to build, and the rest is paid as the same family would pay rent.

Persons who have small sums to invest can get a first mortgage on the property which is ample security and the Voget Bros. erect the house. The rent pays the interest and the instalments pay off the balance.

This city is very much in need of more dwellings, and those having capital to invest or wanting a home should investigate the plans on which this firm builds houses.

They have certainly made a record of doing things for this city and for those who want to own homes on easy terms.

Well, anyway, we can settle down to business now.

Thinks It Saved His Life.

Lester M. Nelson, of Naples, Maine, says in a recent letter: "I have used Dr. King's New Discovery many years, for coughs and colds, and I think it saved my life. I have found it a reliable remedy for throat and lung complaints, and would no more be without a bottle than I would be without food." For nearly 40 years New Discovery has stood at the head of throat and lung remedies. As a preventive of pneumonia, and healer of weak lungs it has no equal. Sold under guarantee at J. C. Perry's drug store. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.
