GETS IN WRONG GRAND- STAND AT BALL GAME
An old man, with flowing beard and, in search of the spot, went to the baseball field where the players of the asylum and Chemawa Indian school were having their game. He arrived a little late and was somewhat bewildered where to sit, but saw a stand near and after a little argument with the man in charge of the stand got in. He felt to thinking why the gatekeeper would take his admission money when he went into the grandstand, but asked the peculiar question of how he managed to get out; this when he hadn't been in. But he soon learned, for when the game was over he started to leave the stand, but the gatekeeper wouldn't let him go and made him walk in a line which was formed by the spectators in the stand. The line started on a man and the impudent gatekeeper walked by his side holding to his cuff and the startled gentleman found himself marched into the asylum, where the mistake was discovered when they tried to find which ward he should go.

Mail Thief in Portland.
Portland, Or., June 15.—That the ring leader of the gang that recently stole a mail pouch containing $50,000 from a train near Kansas City is hiding in Oregon near Portland is the belief of the authorities is evidenced by the presence of several government secret service men in the Rose city.

A Portland negro, who is said by the local police, to make a specialty of robbing mail pouches, is the object of their search. This man, who was employed by a Portland hotel some time ago, was tried on a charge of stealing $10,000 worth of jewelry from the room of a guest but was acquitted. Later he was convicted and sentenced to three years in prison for robbing the postoffice at Salt Lake City. It is known that within the last few weeks he worked in Kansas City.

A CONSPIRACY TO SPOIL BERRY CROP
(United Press Leased Wire.)
Hood River, Or., June 15.—The police of this city today invoked the aid of the Portland detectives in running down the conspirators who destroyed with dynamite 10,000 crates of strawberries, valued at $30,000, belonging to the growers who are members of the Farmers Irrigating company.

With heavy charges of the explosive the conspirators blew up 150 feet of flume on a hillside on the west side of Hood River some time early Sunday morning and today two-thirds of the crop in the valley, or about 400 acres are without water and will be in this condition for at least three days. The damage was done at a time when the berry season is at its height. Without water to sustain the berries until they can ripen during the present warm spell, those growing along the ditch will amount to nothing. An investigation made today shows that a tremendous amount of explosives must have been used to blow up the flume. Officers of the irrigating company have under suspicion former workmen who were refused work this season.
