RISK BOY TO PROVE THEORY

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Milwaukee, Wis., June 26.—In order to disprove the theory of Matthew Schwindt's parents that their little child was injured by being drawn under a train by suction, the St. Paul road risked the life of a little boy by placing him near to a rapidly moving train. The boy was not killed and today the railroad got off with a verdict of $10,000 for not having guard fences instead of $25,000 asked for in the suit.

The complaint charged that the Schwindt boy was walking between the two tracks and was sucked under an engine by the vacuum caused by the engine rushing rapidly past a line of freight cars.

The boy put in this perilous position by the railroad told the jury, who witnessed the demonstration, that he only felt a breeze.

LIGHTS WILL MAKE SALEM A GALA TOWN

INCANDESCENT LAMPS WILL BE STRUNG ACROSS STREETS FOR FOURTH—MAYBE MADE PERMANENT FIXTURES.

It now seems probable that Salem is to be a well lighted city, in fact the proposed lighting in the business section would be better termed illumination. It was settled some time ago by those in charge of the Fourth of July celebration that if possible the streets would be illuminated by two or three thousand feet of incandescent electric streamers. At the meeting of the Business Men's league last night Manager Page reported the cost of the lights per night at so reasonable a figure that it was practically settled in the minds of the business men that the streamers should be a permanent fixture.

If the plans of the business men are carried out, Salem will have one of the most effective illuminating systems to be found anywhere. The lights will be strung across the street at intervals of 20 yards, making five strings to the block. The lights on the streamers will be three feet apart, and each light will be of eight-candle power. The light arranged in this manner will cover eight blocks.

According to the instructions of the Business Men's league the lights will be installed at once. Manager Page reported that the lights could be had, about 300 feet in all, and upon a motion by Hal Patton he was instructed to purchase the streamers, and put them up immediately. The league appropriated $300 for the lights, and they will ask the city and the Board of Trade to help in paying for them.

At the meeting last night Chief of Police Gibson was appointed grand marshal of the Fourth of July parade and D. R. Yantis was appointed to assist the marshal in arranging the details of the big parade, and to see that it was properly carried out.

It is probable that the committee on sports will have some of the attractions now holding forth at the Dallas street fair. Walt Shipps, of the sports committee, want to Dallas today and will try to secure the balloon ascension, the high dive, and several other attractions.
