No Need of Suffering from Rheumatism.

It is a mistake to allow anyone to suffer from rheumatism, as the pain can always be relieved, and in most cases a cure effected by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. The relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. It makes sleep and rest possible. Even in cases of long standing this liniment should be used on account of the relief which it affords. Do not be discouraged until you have given it a trial. For sale by Dr. Stone's drug store.

"I have been using Cascarets for insomnia, with which I have been afflicted for over twenty years, and I can say that Cascarets have given me more relief than any other remedy I have ever tried. I shall certainly recommend them to my friends as being all they are represented to be."
—Thos. Gillard, Elgin, Ill.

Modes for Motorists.

Directoire gowns, made from patterns which were the fashion a hundred years ago, are now to be followed by ladies' bonnets of the type that was the vogue 50 years ago. The new bonnets are of the shape of a coal scuttle, and are similar to those which figure in Leech's famous Punch pictures of 1858 and 1859.

Motoring is responsible for the reintroduction of these Old World bonnets. Lady motorists have long sighed for a headgear which should be pretty and at the same time practicable for their pastime.

Up to the present they have had to be content with an ordinary hat made of celluloid—a creation at once ungainly and ugly.

But the new bonnet, in spite of its ancient derivation, seems to be precisely what fashionable lady motorists have long looked for.

The bonnets, which are taken from Parisian models, have been introduced into London and are made of straw and silk of any color required.

The bonnet lies closely on the head, and comes well over the forehead. It is trimmed with a quilting of ribbon round the edge, with a rosette at each side. It is fastened with long, wide ribbons tied under the chin.

An excellent feature which will be appreciated by lady motorists, is that the motor veil is fixed to the bonnet.

Hitherto motor veils have been sold separately from the hats, and the latest innovation is a distinct improvement.

A coal-scuttle bonnet costs 49s 6d., and already it is being worn by many well-known society ladies while motoring.

Coal-scuttle bonnets, however, are not confined to motorists.

Delightful little creations of this type are being sold in West End shops for babies, and it is not improbable that this shape will be generally worn during the present season.—London Mirror.

Cruel Ingenuity of the Night Riders.

The tales which tell of the devilish ingenuity of the night riders and their allies may read like the fiction of Hugo or Dumas, but the fate which some of their victims suffered has been only too well verified. Tobacco fields have literally been sown with the seeds of death, as is shown by what happened on the Hollman place, just outside of Henderson. Frank Hollman was one of the most extensive growers in this part of the Blue Grass region. He was asked to join the Planters' society, and when he refused several threatening letters were received by him. One morning he went to his barn to find on the door a ring of black paint, in the center of which was a grinning skull just above a pair of bones arranged in the form of an "X."

Hollman was a man of "pluck," as his neighbors called it. He paid no attention to the warning. The weeks passed, and as no raid was made on his place it was thought his enemies feared to attack it, knowing that he was well armed.

When the season for plowing arrived Hollman decided to "put in" tobacco on a ten-acre lot located near his house. With his ten-year-old son, he started to turn over the top stubble, the boy driving and the father guiding the plow. When about midway in the field the family in the house was startled to hear a loud report. Hastening to the windows they saw a thin smoke rising from the field. When they reached the spot where the plow had been furrowing they saw the bodies of father and son lying on the edge of a ragged gap blown out of the earth. The bodies were so blackened that they could be recognized only by the clothing. Both horses had been instantly killed and the woodwork of the plow was blown to splinters. This is the testimony of eye-witnesses given to the coroner's jury.—Day Allen Willey in Metropolitan Magazine.

An Old French Art Revived.

I have lately made acquaintance, at the Artistic Gown exhibition, writes Claudine, with Miss Jessie M. Mason's wonderful skill in pen painting. The art is an old French one revived, and a most interesting and effective handicraft it is, giving the best effect of needlework for such decorative purposes as floral representations upon velvet, silk, satin and other fabrics, at a much quicker rate of production than the needle can command.

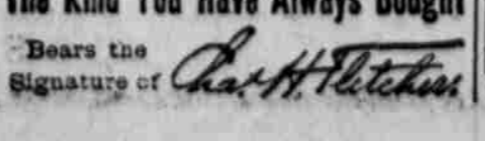

Miss Jessie M. Mason was taught the art by an old governess some years ago, and has since that time been able to improve upon the work to a very appreciable degree. She has even gone so far as to invent a pen specially suited for her purpose. No other instrument is needed save a pen, yet the effect of the work is, as I have said, that of the handsomest embroidery.

For the embellishment of evening dresses, wall panels, screens and other pieces of fancy work pen painting is ideal. At this moment the artist I have mentioned is busy at her home in Buxton decorating a court train of pearl gray duchesse satin with a design of large Madonna lilies and true lovers' knots in silver. It is to be the possession of a very great lady, and is a piece of work that should be most effective when finished.

Marriage License.
