

DEMOCRATIC FIRST AND SECOND PLACE POSSIBILITIES

Sketches of Those Most Prominently Mentioned for Nomination at the Denver Convention for the Presidency and Vice-Presidency.—Written by Staff Representatives of the United Press.

Washington, July 2.—When the Democrats in the United States senate, after the loss of Gorman, the astute politician from Maryland, began looking about for a new leader, they passed by the brilliant Bailey, the argumentative Bacon, the eloquent Daniel, and the matter of fact Simmons, and cast their choice on Charles A. Culberson, of Texas.

When a great party makes a decision of such moment there must be among its members a supreme confidence that the man of their choice possesses the necessary qualifications of resourcefulness in debate, alertness of intelligence, political sagacity, and the ability to command the support of his colleagues.

In none of these important matters has Culberson been found wanting. The position of leader of the minority in the senate is a thankless one at best. But Culberson has made the most possible out of it, and has realized as much from it as his colleagues had any reason to expect.

Always vigilant, he has fought for and maintained the rights of his fellow Democrats on the floor without pushing himself forward to offensive prominence. In fact if any criticism might be made it would be that he lacked aggressiveness as a leader. Possessed of a retiring modesty—and perhaps knowing the men with whom he had to deal—he has never had recourse to the party whip as an offset to the big stick.

Culberson is 53 years old, but except for his curly iron-gray hair, it would be difficult to believe it. A trifle below six feet in height, he is erect, well built and active, with a clear complexion, and merry gray eyes that can, at times, get very steely and piercing.

Himself an athlete and a boxer of no mean degree while at college Culberson is responsible for the fact that no exhibitions of the "manly art of self-defense" can be pulled off in Texas. While governor of the state in 1895 the match was arranged between James J. Corbett and "Bob" Fitzsimmons for the title of champion pugilist of the world, then held by the former. Searching about for a place where the laws did not prohibit such exhibitions, it was decided to fight the contest at Dallas.

As soon as this announcement was made, Culberson declared that he would prevent it. It was pointed out to him that there was no law of Texas against boxing, but one bright day Culberson proceeded to one of the busiest corners of Dallas and mounting a box soon had a crowd gathered around him. The burden of his speech was something like this: "Do you men of Texas propose to allow a prize fight to be held in our state? Are you willing to let these men from New York and California say that the law won't let them fight at home, but they can come down to the rowdy state of Texas and pull off a ring battle? Do you want to have our state disgraced before the whole civilized world?"

And much more along that line. Some one in the crowd called out that there was no law against it. "No," replied Culberson, "but there soon will be."

The public sentiment in the state was in favor of allowing the fight to go on and it was advertised as the greatest battle in the history of the ring. Three days after his street speech, Gov. Culberson called a special session of the legislature directing attention to the lack of law on the subject and declaring that every legislator with a decent regard for the opinion of mankind should hasten to enact a proper statute. The bill was passed and there has been no prize fighting in Texas since.

Old-timers around Washington will remember old Dave Culberson, father of the present senator, with his great shock of hair and his slow, cumbersome method of getting about. Although a pretty successful politician—he was in congress for 23 years—he conceived the idea that his heavy gait was a drawback to him. So he determined that "Charley," who even at that early age frequently accompanied his father on his political campaigns, should be trained differently. With this end in view he sent him to the Virginia Military Institute. It is to the drill that he received there that the erect, military carriage of the senator now is due.

After taking a law course at the University of Virginia, Culberson was admitted to the bar in 1877 and, returning to Dallas, entered partnership with his father. He became one of the most successful lawyers in the state. Elected county attorney of Marion county in 1890, he was soon afterwards made attorney general of the state, which office he held until 1894, when he was elected governor. This place he held for two terms and then came to the senate, defeating for the nomination two such veterans as Roger Q. Mills, the tariff revisionist, and Gen. John H. Reagan, formerly a member of Jeff Davis' cabinet.

In April of last year, on invitation of both houses of the Texas legislature, Culberson gave his views on the trust question, incidentally opposing the government ownership of railroads idea advanced by Bryan. In the course of that speech Culberson said:

"The overshadowing evil of the generation is combination of interests which result in monopolies, and the state officials can render no greater service to the public than to drive from this state every trust, whether organized here or elsewhere. Let us, in addition, send the magistrates to the penitentiary and give notice to the world that Texas will not tolerate these public plunderers."

He expressed his opinion of President Roosevelt in the following terms: "He is extravagant and wasteful in the expenditure of public money; he has entangled us in alliances with foreign nations; he believes in a world-wide expansion and the colonization of alien peoples; he has no conception of the fundamental distinction between the three great divisions of government; he favors an absolute and personal government rather than one regulated by law; and, finally, he is a Federalist of the most dangerous character; believing practically in the obliteration of state lines, in the destruction of the reserved rights of the state, and in the absorption by the United States of every governmental power worthy of the name."

Speaking of Bryan's railway ownership doctrine, Culberson said: "Much as I am attached to him personally, much as I admire his blameless life, his unquestioned sincerity, his ardent patriotism, and his splendid eloquence, and certain as now seems his nomination for the presidency, I cannot conceive that his views on this question will ever receive the approval of the democracy of the country."

NERVOUS SUFFERERS

WILL BE INTERESTED IN THE CASE OF MR. CUSHING.

His Doctor Gave Him No Hope of Getting Well but the Modern Tonic Treatment Brought Benefit at Once.

A remarkable instance of the power of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in severe nervous diseases is shown in the case of Mr. Timothy Cushing, an oil-well contractor, of Sistersville, West Virginia, where he is well known. He tells of the wonderful benefit he received as follows: "In the fall of 1896 I first noticed a drawing of the muscles above the knees which gradually worked downward to the feet. Then I had a blistering sensation on the soles of my feet. This would occur after I had been sitting in a chair with the weight of my limbs on my feet. On attempting to walk I had an occasion to make a quick move I would lose control of my limbs. Later I had numbness all over my body, especially in the last three fingers of each hand and the half of my arms up to my elbows. My speech also was affected. I was practically helpless in bed for perhaps ten days and could not eat without assistance.

"My doctor thought for a time that I had a great many of the symptoms of locomotor ataxia and led me to believe that my disease was incurable. He tested my sense of feeling by pricking my leg below the knee with a needle and it would be some time before I could feel the prick. I had difficulty in walking in the dark or with my eyes closed. The doctor finally pronounced my case neuritis. I was under his care for perhaps six weeks and, while he did the best he could, he gave me no hopes of getting well.

"Advised by a neighbor, I began to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and noticed a change almost immediately. I improved rapidly and could stand on my feet. In a few weeks I walked up town, and continued to take the pills until I was able to go to work. I have worked pretty hard since and have been able to work all of the time."

For further proof of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done in such diseases as nervous prostration, nervous debility, sciatica, St. Vitus' dance, nervous headaches, partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia, send for our booklet "Nervous Disorders" which is free upon request.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50c per box; six boxes for $2.50, by Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

A convention is to be held next week at Denver to nominate a vice president on the Democratic ticket.

Over Thirty-five Years.

In 1872 there was a great deal of diarrhoea, dysentery and cholera infantum. It was at this time that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was first brought into use. It proved more successful than any other remedy or treatment, and has for thirty-five years maintained that record. From a small beginning its sale and use has extended to every part of the United States and to many foreign countries. Nine druggists out of ten will recommend it when their opinion is asked, although they have other medicines that pay them a greater profit. It can always be depended upon, even in the most severe and dangerous cases. For sale by Dr. Stone's drug store.

What's the use of an election. Some of the papers have settled it already.

The New Remedy That Does.

"Dr. King's New Discovery is the remedy that does the healing others promise but fail to perform," says Mr. E. R. Pierson, of Auburn Centre, Pa. "It is curing me of throat and lung trouble of long standing, that other treatments relieved only temporarily. New Discovery is doing me so much good that I feel confident its continued use for a reasonable length of time will restore me to perfect health." This renowned cough and cold remedy and throat and lung healer is sold at J. C. Perry's drug store 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.
