The Fourth of July celebrations show that the spirit of the people is for independence, not dependence, and that they are thoroughly Democratic-not in the party sense, but in the American sense.

The newspapers are expected to publish stuff for every department of the government to educate the people and above all to make the department popular with the people. All these departments are in the hands of civil service clerks who are not in touch with the people. A federal appointment is next to impossible for a newspaper man to get if it is worth having. Some cheap political wirepuller gets it, or some relative of a high puble official. Then the newspapers must help pull the success. Newspapers generally are refusing to do this cheap work of gratultous*publicity for still cheaper officialism.

Let nobody despair of the people winning out on the election of the next U. S. senator. The methods of the old Portland machine are so well understood that no man with a particle of respect for the way he stands with the general public will listen to or to any family than the most lavish their arguments in any form.
