F. W. Heyser, Salem's Tri-City league catcher, will have the management of the team hereafter owing to Dave Edwards being unable to give the home club the necessary attention on account of his work, which takes up most of his time. "Dutch" Heyser is no amateur in judging baseball players, as the big chap has seen the best of them and also the worst, and his judgment in selecting the upper crust for the diamond is properly on the dot. Mr. Heyser will be backed by Dave Edwards, the former manager, who will still retain his position as captain, and also the one to place the best man in the right position on the team, but Heyser will handle the payroll, hiring of new players, etc. The change of management was arranged this afternoon between Edwards and Heyser, who have both taken over the local Tri-City club for the remainder of the season.

Manager Heyser is now negotiating for a new twirler just out from the East, by the name of Massing. Massing's reputation as pitcher is very good, and he is said to have all manner of steam and twisters. The management have had no definite word as yet from the new man but his singnature is almost a certainty.

Floyd Meyers, the youngster who was picked up by the former management of the local club, was released Sunday evening by the present officials. Meyers has a splendid arm, but the necessary headwork to go with it, is sadly lacking.

Porterfield, the third sack man for Salem during the first of the season, has been released by the North Bend management, which aggregation he joined lately. The cause of his release is reported to have been due to three erros on his part in the first game he played with the North Bend team. "Dinny" Hull and Manion, both formerly of the Cherry Pickers, are making good with the North Bend club.

"Slim" Gardner, the big twirler who pitched the East Portland Tri-City club to victory several times, and Thomas, center fielder on the same team, are both pulling out nicely with the Coquille team. Manager Pomeroy of the East Portlanders let two good men slip away in Gardner and Thomas.

The future life of the Salem Tri-City ball team depends largely on the support given by the local fans. Kick in, men, and give Edwards and Heyser your best wishes, anyway.

A first-class bunch of artists on the diamond are appreciated by every American big enough to yell. A player who pulls off a nice clean stunt out on the ball field, no matter whether he be a member of the visiting team or not, is entitled to a noisy credit from the fans, and the unlucky chap who chances to boot the ball has a roast coming, but only on the visiting team. It is considered a very poor policy to rap a home man for loose playing, as it may take all his interest away from the game, where, should he be given the glad sign of "accidents will always happen," that player may be depended upon to make a good showing before the game ends. There is nothing like raising a visiting team in the air, toward victory for the home aggregation, but that feat must be pulled off precisely at the proper time or not at all. If a visiting team should "get next" to a bunch of fans who were just hollering for the fun of it, the fans may save their breath as far as helping win the game is concerned, but, a band of men who are right in the game from start to finish and who butt in at the proper time when the visiting team are trying to work out a puzzle framed up by the home bunch, will put things on the hot grate for the visitors every time. On the other hand, should a member of the visiting club make a good play, give him what is due, it won't hurt your favorite's chances, and it will be a far better satisfied team leaving town after the game whether winner or loser. There is only one man on the diamond who deserves neither encouragement or roasts at any time and he is the "umps." An umpire is supposed to have perfect knowledge of the national game, and his word is law. Should he make a decision unsatisfactorily, let the players themselves argue the point. He is not responsible to the spectator for his work. The respective clubs hire him and he is there to officiate for the interest of the game in general with the recomendation of the professional players behind him, which should be considered by all those who sometimes see fit to rip him to pieces for a decision or two off color.

Help for Those Who Have Stomach Trouble.

After doctoring for about 12 years for a bad stomach trouble, and spending nearly five hundred dollars for medicine and doctor's fees, I purchased my wife one box of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets, which did her so much good that she continued to use them and they have done her more good than all of the medicine I bought before.—Samuel Boyer, Folsom, Iowa. Claudianes told Langdon that he had watched the house for three weeks, gaining knowledge of its surroundings by posing as a potato peddler He got $20 a night and $10 a day for watching the house, he said, and made three attempts to blow it up before he actually succeeded.

They got the dynamite from Arizona, he said and carried it in a valise to Oakland.

"I used four feet of fuse," said Claudianes, "and had eight minutes in which to get away after I put the dynamite on the porch. An automobile was awaiting for me and I was in another part of the city when the explosion occurred."

Claudianes took the district attorney and his detectives over the whole ground and pointed out caches where he had hidden the dynamite before the explosion.

"I used 32 pounds of dynamite in this job," the Greek said. "It was right here that I placed it," and he pointed to the wrecked vestibule of the Gallagher home.

After Claudianes had explained the details of the first Gallagher dynamiting, he went with Langdon and the detectives to the scene of the second explosion at Perkins and Belmont streets where three empty houses belonging to the ex-supervisor were blown up. "I used 30 pounds of dynamite here," he explained to Langdon. He said that when he had failed to kill Gallagher he decided to wreck all of Gallagher's property.

Claudianes refused stubbornly to give any information as to who had paid the money for the dynamiting.

"I won't tell you that," was the only answer that District Attorney Langdon could get from him.

Only once in his confession did Claudianes mention the graft cases. He said that he had been sent to the trial of Tirey L. Ford, chief counsel for the United Railroads, to watch.

"Watch whom?" asked Langdon.

"Just to watch," snapped back the Greek.

After the man had gone over the ground of the outrages he was brought back to San Francisco and started to walk away from the party. District Attorney Langdon, however, had him locked up.

"You'll never get anything from me if you lock me up," he threatened and he has so far kept his threat.

To District Attorney Langdon who has visited him in his cell several times, he has steadfastly denied that he confessed to the crime and has wandered off into incoherent stories when questioned.

Over Thirty-five Years.

In 1872 there was a great deal of diarrhoea, dysentery and cholera infantum It was at this time that Chamberlain's colic, Cholera and Diarrohea Remedy was first brought into use. It proved more successful than any other remedy or treatment, and has for thirty-five years maintained that record. From a small beginning its sale and use has extended to every part of the United State and to many foreign countries. PIUS X

"The pope's tastes in the direction of food are just as simple as ever they were.

"One morning the pope woke up feeling not very well and he was recommended to try a bottle of tokay which the emperor of Austria had presented to his holiness over a hundred years ago. The pope took a glassful and felt better and the servant removed the bottle. At lunch, however, the pope asked that the bottle be brought back. The servant hesitated and stammered, and then told the pope that it was not the custom in the vatican to serve again anything which the pope had already tasted. His holiness insisted on having the bottle back and the servant was compelled to confess that it had been quickly emptied in the servants' hall. Since then Pius X invariably takes away with him after any meal any unfinished bottle of good wines. He locks it in a sideboard in his room and finishes it when he feels inclined.

Cigarettes and Cards.

"After lunch his holiness smokes a cigarette and goes to bed for a short nap.

"When he was the archbishop the pope was in the habit of playing a game of cards every evening with his secretary and the prefect and the chief of police. It is not certain whether Pius X still follows this ancient custom of the patriarch of Venice, but many people say that he does.

"Vatican conditions do not permit of the pope taking long walks. In fact, Leo XIII never walked in the gardens at all without a guard of the Swiss troops and usually drove. The present pope when he desires walks and insists on strolling through the gardens alone. He therefore makes use of a secret staircase to leave the vatican. The first time he did this there was a panic in the vatican—the pope was missing and not to be found. The alarm was given and the Swiss guards turned out. All the horses were got ready for search parties when someone saw the pope hidden behind a chrub quietly enjoying the scene.

Pius Not a Dreamer.

"But Pius X is not altogether the dreamer that some people imagine him. While still at Salzano he heard one of his companions at a game of cards swearing like a trooper because of his bad luck. The future pope allowed him to go on for a little while but in the end he lost patience and at last got up and cuffed the poor man about unmercifully.

"And even after the enemies of Pius X think him incapable of an energetic policy."

CONDITION OF SHEEP STEADILY IMPROVING

July 1 the federal stock inspectors, working in Oregon under the direction of Dr. W. S. McClure, completed the inspection of the sheep of this state and the returns that have been received at the Pendleton bureau of animal industry office show some very interesting things, says the East Oregonian. The efficiency of the present state sheep law and the benefit that that state receives from the government are two things that are very evident.

A year ago when the sheep of Oregon were inspected by the federal men it was disclosed that 16 4-5 per cent of the sheep of the state were affected with scabies. Under the provisions of the sheep law every sheep in the state was dipped, the work being done between April and September.

This year the federal inspectors commenced an inspection February 1 and all of the sheep of the state were inspected between that time and July 1. Reports received from his men by Mr. McClure show that out of the 2,245,055 sheep in the state only 2 53-100 per cent were found to be scabby. These sheep were all dipped twice under the supervision of a federal inspector and all exposed sheep were dipped once.

On September 1 another inspection of all the sheep in the state will be started and it will require three months to complete the work. At that time all scabby sheep, if any, will be dipped.

The inspection just closed shows that the following counties were absolutely free from scab: Baker, Wallowa, Grant, Wheeler, Crook, Sherman, Wasco, Gilliam, Morrow and Harney.

This year Umatilla county had 1900 scabby sheep, whereas a year ago it had 42,000. The 1900 scabby found this year were dipped in May and when inspected again June 20 were found free from disease. There is now no scab in Umatilla county.

Nearly all of the scab now existing is found in Lake and Malheur counties. Most of the scab is among bands in southern Malheur and owned by Spaniards. These men were slow to dip last year. The scab in Lake county was scattered by a band of bucks.

In the Willamette valley there is now no scab excepting among a few small bands in Douglas county.

Powder Valley Crops Will Be Short At Best—Is An Off Year with the Tillers of the Soil in this Section.

(Baker City Herald.)

Owing to the unusually scanty rainfall of the last few months, Powder river valley is beginning to present a semi-desert like appearance. Some of the crops are as good as they have been in previous years, but others are almost a failure. The farmers are somewhat discouraged over the small returns now promised for their year's work, yet they say this is one of the exceptional years which can not be avoided. They are hopeful that prices will be large enough this fall to make up in a small degree at least for the small yield.

Many of the prominent farmers report that the hay crop, alfalfa, wild hay and timothy and clover, will show little shortage this year. The average tonnage per acre will be fully as large as last year and the quality of the hay will be good. Alfalfa is already to cut and hay harvest on the large meadows producing wild hay will begin in a few days. It is rumored, however, that some of the hay meadows will not produce a good crop because of late frosts and lack of winter snow and spring rain.

Though it is generally acknowledged that the hay crop is nearly as large as that of an average year, oats, barley and wheat are unquestionably short. Fields that have not been dry for years in the summer months are in great need of rain. Only during the last few days have the grain fields began to reveal a parched appearance, and a good rain could yet, perhaps, save many thousands of bushels of grain that is in the making, from destruction. To the passing observer who drives along the lanes, the green healthy looking hay and alfalf which is already being put in stack, gives a picture of wealth and prosperity.

When the doctor is called he asks: "How are the bowels?" They are generally wrong. His visit might have been saved by a timely dose of Lane's Family Medicine.
