STATE NEWS

Camp Lincoln. The streets will be patrolled, and the city kept continually under martial law until all danger of further outbreaks has passed.

A man who was present last night at the attack on Loper's restaurant said that Loper sat in the rear of the place, smoking a cigar and holding a rifle across his knees. He did not shoot until the more venturesome members of the mob started to enter. The crowd called Loper a "nigger lover," and this cry seemed to fire them to the attack. The restaurant was one of the best in the city, and was handsomely fitted.

The trouble was started by an assault upon Mrs. Earl Hallam, wife of a street car man, by a negro Thursday night. When George Richardson was arrested a mob immediately began talking of lynching. The burst of fury followed the knowledge last night that the negro had been taken out of town in Loper's automobile. Most of the injured and the killed were struck by bullets fired during the rioting, and it is difficult to place responsibility upon individuals.

Horrible Lynching.
Those who witnessed the lynching of Hunter say that it was the most atrocious act of the night. After Hayes was shot, Hunter was at once accused, but escaped. When he was found in a nearby building, it is said, the white men deliberately fired at him. After he fell three more shots were fired at him.

The negro was still alive when he was dragged from the house, but it is thought that two shots fired before he was hanged probably ended his sufferings. His face was covered with blood when the rope was fastened about his neck.

While the body was suspended young boys played with it, and swung it backward and forward, so that it struck against a nearby wall. Loper estimated today that his loss amounts to $50,000.

Negroes Kept Hid.
Bloomington, Ill., Aug. 15.—Geo. Richardson and Joe James, the negroes who were spirited away from Springfield last night, are being closely guarded here, and the utmost secrecy is maintained regarding their presence. The sheriff evidently fears that a mob will come here from Springfield, if it is known that Richardson is confined here. He gave out a statement saying Richardson had been taken to Peoria, but it is known that he is here.

Chaffin Hero.
Springfield, Ill., Aug. 15.—Eugene W. Chaffin, prohibition candidate for president, who was making a public speech here at the time of the rioting last night, and was struck by a brick, today is one of the heroes of the outbreak. One of his friends, who was on the speaker's stand, today gave the following version of his participation:

"Chaffin was speaking, when he suddenly heard a great uproar, and a negro came running toward us, followed by a wild mob of white men, who evidently were trying to kill him. They knocked the negro down several times, and in his desperation the black man climbed on the stand. Chaffin was perfectly calm. He faced the yelling mob and pretending to have a pistol, threatened to shoot anyone who touched the negro. He called upon them to think what they were doing. Someone in the crowd threw a piece of brick that struck Chaffin on the side of the head. As he talked to the crowd the negro slipped off the back of the platform and escaped."

LABOR CHAMPION TO COME TO AMERICA
(United Press Leased Wire.)
Glasgow, Aug. 15.—James K'erbardie, chairman of the labor party in the house of commons, sailed today for Canada, with the intention of organizing the laboring interests of the Dominion into a body similar to that of the mother country. He will also visit the United States for a like purpose.

The "Arch of Welcome," at Sixth and Irving streets, in Portland, has been torn down, and the contractor's fee of $2850 refused, as it was not finished in time for the Rose Festival, as ordered.

David Eccles, the Utah capitalist, announced to the La Grande Commercial Club last evening that he was prepared to finance the big irrigation project for Union county to the extent of $400,000. It is estimated that a million and a half dollars will be used before the work is completed, the extra amount being contributed from time to time.

The Wood Lots of Japan.
In these times of great drains on the timber supply, caused by the heavy demand for forest products of all kinds, Americans may see in Japan an example of what can be done in growing wood on small plots. That country contains 21,000,000 wood lots, about three-fourths of which belong to private persons and one-fourth to communes. The average size of the plot is less than nine-tenths of an acre. They usually occupy the steepest, roughest, poorest ground. In this way land is put to use which would otherwise go to waste and if unwooded would lose its soil by the wash of the dashing rains. From Japan's wood lots the yearly yield of lumber is about 88 feet, board measure, an acre and three-fourths of a cord of firewood. In many cases the yield is much higher. More than 500,000,000 trees are planted yearly to make up what is cut for lumber and fuel. Assessment for taxation is low, averaging for the 21,000,000 lots less than $1 an acre. With all the care in cutting and the industry in replanting, it is by no means certain that Japan's forests are holding their own. If preservation of the forests is doubtful there, it is evident that depletion must be alarmingly rapid in other countries which cut unsparingly and plant very little. On the other hand it is encouraging to see what can be done with rough, steep and poor land. The United States has enough of that kind, without touching the rich agricultural acres, to grow billions of feet of lumber.—The Pathfinder.

LYNCHING, RIOTS

morning, and is dying at St. John's hospital. Bowe was attacked by the negroes as he was making his way home. They fired upon him, and he fled, but they pursued, shooting as they ran, until he fell. The negroes then searched his pockets, taking a diamond ring from his finger, a diamond stud and all his money and valuables. Bowe was found lying where he was shot, and hurried to the hospital.

The city is quiet today after a night of horrors, and soldiers are patrolling the streets to prevent any new outbreak. All saloons are closed and the authorities are using every precaution to prevent trouble.

The section of the city occupied by negroes looks like it had been swept by a cyclone or wrecked by an explosion. The restaurant of Harry T. Loper, who loaned the sheriff his automobile to spirit away George Richardson, a negro, whom the mob wanted for an attack upon Mrs. Earl Hallam, is a complete wreck and the twisted frame of his motor car lies in the street in the ashes of the restaurant fixtures and furniture.

The militia from Peoria, Pekin and Decatur arrived here at 2:30 o'clock in a special train. The riots were then at their height, following the shooting of James Hayes, white, onlooker, by Charles Hunter, a negro hotel proprietor. The mob, already wild with the hours of excitement, rushed Hunter and quickly overpowered him. He was dragged from a building, where he tried to hide, and amid the hoots and yells of the mad mob, a rope was fastened about his neck and he was dragged to a nearby tree and there hanged, several shots being fired into his suspended body.

The soldiers, with bayonets fixed, charged through the station, and succeeded in routing the crowds in the business section.

In the meantime the work of destruction was going on in the negro quarter, where houses were being burned, and the blacks being put to flight. The firemen who had been summoned found them selves helpless.

"Save the houses of white people, but don't put a drop of water on a nigger's house, or we will cut the hose," yelled the mob. The firemen at first thought this was an idle threat, but after one line of hose had been severed they saw it was useless to oppose the demands of the crowd.

The poorer part of the negro section had been practically wiped out when the soldier arrived, and the crowds were moving on the homes of the more respectable blacks.

"Run every nigger out of town," yelled the furious mob, many members of which carried torches. It was a terrible sight, in the red light of the fires, to see half-insane men rushing wildly on their rampage of destruction.

The troops drew up in front of the mob and ordered a halt.

The rioters paid no attention and continued to advance, not believing the "win soldiers," as they called the militiamen, would shoot. Then came a sterner command from the militia. Still the mob advanced.

Suddenly there was a crash of muskets and flash of fire. The shots went high in the air. The mob saw that no effort was made to hit anyone, and, in their frenzy, hooted at the soldiers. Then came a second volley, also fired in the air. The mob advanced once more. "Disperse, or you will be shot down," came the order from the militiamen. This again was greeted by hoots and a moment later there was a third flash of fire, stretching across the street, accompanied by the crash of the muskets. When the smoke cleared the riots were at an end. Five persons had fallen, and it is believed most of them will die. It is not known how many members of the mob received slight flesh wounds. Some probably were seriously hurt, but were able to reach their homes.

The volley of bullets sufficed to bring the mob to its senses, and it marked the beginning of the restoration of order. The soldiers then surrounded the burning sections, and, under their protection, the firemen went rapidly to work, and soon had the flames under control. Harry T. Loper, proprietor of the restaurant, the destruction of which started the depredations, today said:

Suffers for Good Deed.
"I went through one riot in Cincinnati, in 1883, the greatest in the history of the country, when 100 people were killed, and I know what it means.

"It was to avoid the loss of life that I loaned my automobile to take these men out of town. I didn't want to show any favor to the negro. I am not interested in this negro, and would go as far as any man in seeing him punished, but, after going through the Cincinnati riots, and knowing this sheriff as I do, I knew he would be killed before he would permit any jail breaking.

"I thought I would save his life by removing the negro. I did not try to shoot a single man to protect my place. I only shot into the crowd as long as I was in personal danger myself."

It was learned today that the owners of several fast automobiles were asked yesterday to aid in getting the negro out of town, but refused.

Governor Deneen today ordered the entire First regiment, which is composed of Chicago companies, and the Fourth regiment, which is composed of Southern Illinois companies, to report here today. The remaining companies of the Fifth regiment, which were ordered to be held in readiness yesterday, are en route here now. This means that three full regiments will be on the scene today. The orders were issued before the governor realized the effect of the arrival of the troops early this morning, and it is thought additional troops are not needed.

Sheriff Werner, however, feared another outbreak today or Sunday, and wanted to be prepared and not to risk the possibility of not having sufficient military protection to keep the peace. The general impression here is that there will be no further trouble.

By order of Governor Deneen, the negroes whose homes were destroyed last night will be given shelter at the arsenal and tents will be provided for them as temporary places of abode. The troops will be quartered at
