COUNCIL FAILS TO AGREE ON BROADWAY GRADE

The much-heralded and long-awaited talkfest and love feast which was to settle for all time the ponderous and burdensome question of the grade on Broadway, occurred at the special meeting of the council last evening, at which the city's gladiators were advertised to appear prepared to fight the matter out or to die in the attempt.

Everybody was there—councilmen, railroad officials, attorneys, engineers, property owners and lookers-on. Everybody talked. Some of the councilmen spoke half a dozen times. Maps were displayed, testimony, ordinary and expert, was given; the Oregon Electric company was called everything from the saviour and rejuvenator of the city to a corporation of greed and avarice; and the result of it all was—nothing.

The fight began upon the reading of a resolution which is as follows:

Resolution.

Whereas, by resolution duly adopted by the common council of the city of Salem, on the 3d day of August, 1908, the Oregon Electric Railway company was required to lower its track on Broadway street in the city of Salem, from the north line of Madison street to a point 518 feet south of the intersection of the center line of Belmont street with Broadway street in said city, for the purpose of conforming such track to the grade established by ordinance, and

Whereas, it does not seem expedient or for the best interests of the city to proceed with the proposed improvement of Broadway street, which has hertofore been ordered, and

Whereas, the Oregon Electric Railway company has offered to deliver to the city of Salem from its cars along Broadway street for the improvement of said street, at a grade conforming with the track of said railway, and for a width of — feet on each side of its rails for a distance of approximately 2500 feet, sufficient gravel from the run of said company's gravel pit now being worked near Salem, at the actual cost of such gravel plus 10 per cent for supervision of the work of excavation and transportation.

Now be it resolved, that the Oregon Electric Railway company be and it is hereby permitted subject to all the provisions that its franchise contains to maintain its track upon Broadway street, as now located and constructed, and the city engineer is hereby directed to report to this council a grade for said street conforming with the grade of the track of said railway company as now located and constructed, for the purpose of furnishing to the council data for re-establishing the grade of said street and re-ordering the improvement thereof.

Councilman Radcliff immediately moved the adoption of the resolution, and his motion was greeted by a storm of protest. Nobody seemed to know who introduced the resolution, and Greenbaum, Frazier and Stolz declared it to be too drastic. Before the resolution could be disposed of Councilman Stockton suggested that the officials of the Oregon Electric company be allowed to talk upon the subject. No one objected, and Attorney Kerr of the Oregon Electric Railway company was invited to address the council.

In opening his address Kerr stated that he himself drew up the resolution and requested that it be introduced at the special meeting of the council.

Kerr gave a long list of reasons why the grade of Broadway should conform to the grade of the Oregon Electric company's track instead of vice-versa. The chief reason was expense. In Kerr's opinion the additional expense of lowering the track would be unwarranted. He also contended that this street would be better if it were raised to the level of the track. He called upon Mr. Brown, a civil engineer from Portland, whom the company has employed to investigate the matter, to state his views on the Broadway grade.

Brown claimed that the property along Broadway would not suffer either in appearance or materially by bringing the grade of the street up to the grade of the railway track. He also contended that for the present the high grade would afford a better drainage than the low grade. He stated further that the lowering of the tracks would entail a great deal of unnecessary expense to the company. Brown was asked many puzzling questions by several of the councilmen. Some of them he answered satisfactorily, and some he didn't. One of the questions that stumped the engineer was, "why would not the storm water flood the porperty more if the street were a foot or two above the level of the property than if the property and the street were on the same level?"

After the proposition had been talked to death, and after everyone had his say, the mayor asked the council what its pleasure was in regard to the resolution. Councilman Greenbaum in a vigorous speech moved that the resolution be indefinitely postponed.

Just as the vote was about to be taken Councilman Stolz arose and stated that there were some people who had not expressed their sentiments on the proposition. It was only 9 o'clock, he said, and he suggested that the talkfest be continued.

Vice-president Talbot of the railway company was invited to address the meeting, and he stated that he was ready to take up and settle any phase of the bothersome question.

Next John Bayne discussed the matter on behalf of the property owners. He declared that when a grade was established the contour of the surrounding property should be taken into consideration, and the grade made to conform to it. Mr Bayne had investigated the grade in North Salem, and stated that the railway track along Broadway averaged about one foot higher than the property on either side.

"The people in that district," said Bayne, "want the track brought down to the established grade of the street. They want the permanent improvement of the streets there to proceed. There is no question as to the right and wrong of the thing. The railway company is obliged to put its tracks where they belong.

"We should not take the word of the Oregon Electric in this matter. We should consult our own interests. The company has not fulfilled the conditions of their franchise, and they have not kept their word in all things. They have not even put up the $5000 bond as required by the franchise for the faithful performance of duty, and I don't know now whether they have a franchise or not. You gentlemen are intelligent men, and you can either represent the city of Salem, and put the grade where the city wants it, or you can represent the Oregon Electric company and put it where the Oregon Electric wants it."

H. B. Thielsen next addressed the council. He stated that Mr. Brown expressed the same views that he entertained in regard to the grade on Brodaway. He thought that it would do no damage to the surrounding property to allow the tracks to remain where they are. He also thought that the expense would be too high to justify the change at present. He thought, however, that the track on North High street should be lowered to the established grade.

Then for another hour the matter of lowering the track on Broadway was discussed pro and con. The procedure developed into a veritable testimonial meeting, many of the city fathers almost shedding tears in their efforts to make their fellow-councilmen see that they were right. Councilman Greenbaum begged the members to take the ponderous question home with them and think it over in their sober moments.

Again the mayor attempted to put the question, and again he was interrupted. Suddenly Councilman Stolz moved that the council adjourn until next Monday evening, and the tired city fathers voted unanimously to go home.

Other Business.

The vote by which the Winter street assessment ordinance was passed at the last meeting of the council was reconsidered in order to consider further some of the provisions in the bill.

The application from the Salem branch of the Mitchell, Lewis & Staver company to allow the sign in front of their place of business to remain was referred to the committee on streets.
