GRACE CAMERON WELL RECEIVED

Grace Cameron, pretty chorugirls, catchy songs, and one of the wittiest comedians that ever appeared at the local opera house, Harry Bewley, together made up the best mongrel comic operas to come to Salem for some time. The play was "Little Dolly Dimples" at the Grand opera house Saturday night and that the good work was thoroughly appreciated by the rather small audience was evidenced by repeated encores given the pieces, especially the comedian, Harry Bewley. At one stage of the performance where he sang many comic songs, the hand-clapping and applause brought him back time after time, and the play was only allowed to proceed when the actors ignored the noise of the house, which, when it had quieted down, found that the actor had been speaking several minutes.

It is seldom that such an all-good-looking lot of chorus girls are to be found in one company. A side issue, a sort of filler-in, was Miss Eva W. Speer, "The Human Flute," who is worthy of special mention and praise. Her control of voice, not once bursting into song, is truly marvelous and those who did not hear her, missed a treat.

All in all, the play was a decided success and crowded-houses are prophesied for the opera at the Baker theater in Portland this week.

"DRY TOWN" SALOONS REMAIN

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Bellingham, Wn., Aug. 31.—Not a saloon in the city yesterday did business just as if there were Sunday closing in the county and day the police, sheriff and prosecuting attorney are being besieged by citizens and asked to explain the recent order is not being enforced. From the statements of city and county officials it is evident that the saloons as well as the and billiard parlors will be allowed to have things their own way in the future, at least until after the election. Mayor De Mattos has instructed Chief of Police Cade to molest the saloons.

HALF BURNED BODY SUGGESTS FOUL PLAY

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Bremerton, Wn., Aug. 31.—A body has been received here of the body, two miles west of the yard, of the half burned body of a man lying between two tons of conditions indicating that an attempt had been made to cover a murder. No mark of identification was on the body and it is the view of discoverers that an effort had been made to destroy everything might throw light on the identity of the man and the manner of death.

The city marshal of Charleston visited the scene together with a number of citizens and the coroner investigating today.
