WIFE MURDERER TELLS DETAILS OF AWFUL CRIME

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Boston, Mass., Sept. 4.—With astounding calmness and the stolidity of a savage, Chester S. Jordan, today told Judge Woodworth in the Sumnerville police court how he killed his wife, backed her body to pieces with a razor and a butcher knife and then planned to throw the parts of the dead woman into the ocean from a steamer on which he planned to go to New York.

James L. Livermore, whose wife is Jordan's sister, today engaged William S. Scharton as counsel to defend the man, who probably will plead insanity. The story told by Jordan today differed slightly from that related by him when he was placed under arrest last evening. He added the fact that he slept as usual after killing his wife and said he dismembered her body the next day.

"In the quarrel with my wife she struck me and as we grappled, I knocked her down stairs. I was frightened, I think, when I found she was dead, but I don't remember anything about what I did then," he said.

"I went to bed and as usual when I awoke the next morning, I went into the kitchen. There I found her naked body stretched out on the floor and beside it were the razor and the butcher knife. I saw that the razor had been passed clear around her neck, apparently in an effort to cut off the head. I was startled, I suppose. I don't know how it all happened exactly, but I suppose the sight of the body and the razor gave me the suggestion and I at once began to the work of dismembering the body."

Jordan told how he packed the torso and parts of the flesh in a trunk; put the bones and skull in the furnace and the hair and scalp in the kitchen stove. He then shipped the trunk by express from Sumnerville to Boston, intending to go to New York on the steamer Harvard and throw the contents of the trunk overboard. A delay in the schedule of the boat made him change his plans and resulted in the suspicions of an expressman who called the attention of the police to the trunk and caused the man's arrest last night. The woman was killed Tuesday night. The bravery of the man in the court room was no surprise to the police who had spent the night with him. They say they never confronted a person with so little emotion, and they doubt parts of his story, horrible as it is.

An effort is being made by the officials to find some motive for the crime. Jordan told the court that he was jealous of his wife because she had been drinking lately and he suspected her of having received attentions from other men. In answer to questions from Judge Wentworth he admitted that he struck his wife with his fist, but said that he had no idea of killing her or of hurting her seriously.

Repeated questions regarding his actions after he found that the woman was dead failed to produce anything further than that all he remembered was going to bed. He said he did not know how the woman's clothes were removed from her body or how the gash clear around her neck had been made.

He was held without bail and probably will be given another hearing after the police have completed their work.

The woman was Miss Honorah O'Reilly of this city. She was married to a man named Eddy before she met Jordan. After her wedding to Jordan in 1904, the pair traveled as a vaudeville team for some time without much success and three years ago went to Sumnerville to live. She was 23 years old, Jordan is 28. The parts of her body have been assembled and probably will be buried tomorrow.

Livermore, who has come to Jordan's aid, is a wealthy New York cotton broker.

Californians Fight All Night.

Stockton, Cal., Sept. 4.—The platform for the Democratic state convention was the result of an all-night fight in the resolutions committee which continued until 5 o'clock this morning.

The capital removal plank was the subject of a bitter quarrel, the Alameda county delegation took the stand that the war for the capital is a local war between Berkeley and Sacramento. Theodore A. Bell favored the plank against removal and made a long speech. As finally adopted, it condemns the proposition to remove the capital as "an attempt by the Southern Pacific company to punish the independent voters of Sacramento." Berkeley is not named in the plank.

The suffragettes won their fight. The convention decided unanimously to favor the submission of the equal suffrage amendment to the people.

The principal planks in the platform are as outlined yesterday in these dispatches.

A plank condemning the intrusion of politics in the affairs of the state university was included.

Race track gambling is condemned and a strong law abolishing it recommended. The platform strongly supports Bryan.
