WASTE OF NATION'S RESOURCES

Washington, Sept. 12.—The National Conservation commission has just made public the first of its reports still in its suggestive inquiry into the country's natural resources. The schedules have, as yet, been given out, but between the lines of these it is plainly evident the National Conservation commission intends to hunt down waste in all its varied forms and to devise some means to prevent it. This is apparent in the general schedules as to each of the four sections of the commission—water, forests, lands and minerals.

For instance, the schedule relating to lands inquires into waste of soil by erosion, which is the washing away of the land. That schedule also suggests waste through "bad agricultural methods." The lands schedule likewise goes into waste in the carrying capacity of the available range in the west. The section of waters is inquiring into how much land capable of irrigation is wasted by not being irrigated. More important, "Are existing developed water powers tending to show that we are wasting our waterways to an alarming extent by not using them as we should. Perhaps the greatest form of waste brought out in the entire schedule is that relating to water power. Two of the official inquiries are as follows:

"Are existing developed water powers put to their full use?"

"To what extent can coal be saved by the substitution of water power?"

Under the head of flood waters, the commission inquires, "To what extent are flood waters wasted?"

The minerals section of the commission is seeking to find out "the nature and extent of waste in the mining, extraction and use of mineral products" and "methods of preventing or lessening this waste."

That forest conservation must largely take the form of saving wastes in manufacture seems to be the conviction of the Conservation commission. The commission is busy conducting a census by correspondence to find the common wastes in wood-using industries. Queries have been sent to 500 manufacturers of coverage stock for the purpose of getting a line on the waste of wood in the making of barrels and casks.

Similar wastes occur in turning the logs into headings and in the manufacture of barrels hoops. The forest service is trying to find just how important such wastes are, with the object of suggesting, if possible, some way of cutting down the drains upon the forests which mean no gain to any one, but loss to all. The returns from the inquiries will form part of the report of the Conservation commission, when the work of taking the preliminary inventory of our natural resources is completed.

The National Conservation commission is to take up reports of the various government bureaus which are now at work on this inventory for general discussion at its meeting, in this city, Tuesday, December 1. One week later—Tuesday, December 8—the commission will discuss the same subject with the governors of the state and territories, or their representatives.

afterward, having failed in his candidacy, or having indulged in the contemplated political activity, seeks reinstatement."

Uncle Sam's professional hunters and trappers, who have been assigned to rid the range of predatory animals, are apparently "on the job."

Hunter Breidenstein, employed on the Boise national forest, Idaho, killed 249 coyotes, 6 wild cats, and 1 bear during the past season.

Conservative estimates by stockmen place their losses each year by each animal at $100. Therefore, in this instance alone, the hunter saved in one national forest stock valued at more than $25,000, at a cost to the government of $1195, the amount of his salary.

The hunters are under the jurisdiction of the forest service.

St. Gauden's twenty-dollar pieces are defective, not "stacking" with former issues. Also misunderstanding is on as to whether or not the coins should bear the legend "In God We Trust."

A. Booth & Company, a large fish and oyster concern of Chicago, have failed with debts totalling $5,500,000.

Governor Haskell and former Congressman Dennis Flynn were about to debate at Stroud, Oklahoma, last night, but before they had even begun the lie was passed, the meeting broke up, and it was only through the intervention of friends that a fist fight did not ensue.

and vehicles all upon the track. The buggies and other amusements are in place, and the power machines of which there is a good number of different kinds, are in working order.

Racing Work.

From early morning to evening racing stock can be seen on the track in their daily work out. Up to last week all the horses could be worked out in the forenoon, but the number has grown to such an extent the track will not accommodate them all for the training pur-

The horse are steadily crawling up on their previous records in their daily work-outs, and to predict or pick the winner in the moneyed stakes is a very difficult thing to do, although the fans are attending the training events in large numbers and good deal of enthusiasm is resulting through the excellent manner in which the drivers are getting their respective horses down to the best possible gait.

From all indications the consolation stake of $1000 in the 2:14 class, will be represented largely. This event will attract no little interest owing to the fact horses will enter that are yet green which is an important feature as they sometimes make surprisingly fast time. The Greater Salem purse of $5000 in the 2:08 race will be pulled off on Wednesday, and the fastest racing stock on the Pacific coast will enter; also the Rapid Transit purse, of $1000, which is out to 2:05 in the pacers, will call for the very best of stock in the stables. There will be two more running races each day.

Before proceeding further with the scolding contest, Venezuela and Holland should hire two American pugilists to do the talking.

Though some men are so constituted that they refuse to believe it, we are convinced that most voters can and do make up their minds without being attacked by hysteria.
