In aiming to follow the good advice to seek the society of cheerful people, we do well to remember that the cheerful people will not care to have us around unless we chirp up a bit ourselves.

The conditions of happiness are three: A clean conscience, something to do, and some one to love.

HUNTING PARTIES

Chas. Shipp, of South Salem, one of the most enthusiastic hunters and fishers in the state, and Reub Saunders, the well known bicycle machinist for Watt Shipp, have just returned from a very successful hunting and fishing excursion up on the McKenzie river near the Three Sisters mountains. Mr. Shipp has whipped over ever stream in that vicinity and the result was he brought several hundred blue ribbon specimens of trout home with him also catching enough to supply the larder while in camp. He says, notwithstanding the many grayling which are numerous in the McKenzie, the trout fishing is excellent, and his only regret was that there were not enough pleasure seekers around those parts to consume the number of the speckled beauties he could have easily captured with his trusty rod and line. He has no special grievance against the hungry grayling fish, but the manner in which they became so familiar with his bait, was real aggravating. Reub Saunders was the king of hunters. He succeeded in bringing down an excellent specimen of the cougar tribe out of a 40-foot tree. The big fellow measured about seven feet in length, and was in the best of health according to Reub's way of explaining the killing. He bagged the mountain cat near the Three Sisters, and when he first got sight of him high up in a monster cedar, the cat looked to be just a small kitten, but after the first shot, which brought him to the ground, he looked to be the size of a mature cow. It took two more rounds from Reub's Winchester to put a stop to the cougar's quarrelsome nature.

A party composed of Frank Durbin, D. Harry Olinger, Frank Hughes and Johnnie Jones, who was taken along as cook, left Saturday for Cow Creek canyon for a few days hunting and fishing. After the party had been out the first day with no success, Frank Durbin bagged a nice large jack rabbit and attempted to impress upon Jones, the cook, that it was a species of the deer tribe, whereupon Johnnie's disgust got the better of him and went in search of the real article resulting in his becoming lost in the wilderness in the Cow Creek region and was out 3 1/2 hours before being located.
