PLANT TREES IN EASTERN OREGON

A law should be passed in this state TO ENCOURAGE PLANTING TREES IN EASTERN OREGON.

In ten or twenty years such a law would produce thousands of acres of forest where now there is none.

Iowa, Kansas, the Dakotas, Minnesota and Nebraska HAD LAWS ENACTED TO ENCOURAGE FOREST PLANTING AND CULTIVATION.

There are now 160,000 acres of planted trees in central Kansas, where at one time it was thought that trees could not be grown. As the area in which agricultural crops can be profitably grown is steadily extending, so the limit of forest planting and tree culture is widening always.

The native timber in Kansas is also on the increase; prairie fires no longer sweep unchecked across the plains, and the strips of forests along the rivers and in the ravines and gullies are becoming broader every year.

In some counties cottonwood was the only tree planted for many years. Then boxelder, honey locust, catalpa, osage, orange, Russian mulberry, black walnut and red cedar were tried, and all of them were found suitable over the greater part of the state.

Many persons desire a greater variety of trees, for ornament or for profit. A gentleman living in Abilene, Dickson county, has planted a large number of trees and shrubs about his home and has proved that many species from the forests of the eastern states and of the Old World are well adapted to the prairies of central Kansas. Some of the trees with which he has had success are persimmon, magnolia, basswood, juneberry, black cherry, buckeye, dogwood, sycamore, tulip-tree, pin oak, red oak, English oak, European alder, camperdown elm, redbud, Paulownia, Chinese cork tree, red-leaf maple, ginkgo, red-leaf maple, and cut-leaf weeping birch. These are not so valuable for windbreaks, fence posts and fuel as the trees ordinarily planted for those purposes, and since they are not so hardy, they require more care; but their ornamental value is very good, and as towns grow older, the demand increases for a variety of trees to replace the short-lived cottonwoods.

Some trees which grow naturally in wet situations have also been successful. A good example of this is the bald cypress, whose habitat is the swamps of the lower Mississippi. Trees of the far north, such as the balsam fir and mountain ash, suffer from the heat of summer and should not be planted as far south as Kansas.

EFFECTS OF A POLICY

Few persons can conceive of the effect that would flow to western Oregon from opening a deepsea harbor at Coos Bay and FREE LOCKS AND CANAL ON THE WILLAMETTE.

Western Oregon would be transformed industrially and commercially by these two public improvements.

An open river and an open competitive market for our products WOULD BE LIKE PURE AIR FOR AN OVER-CROWDED SCHOOL ROOM.

In 1905 "Derricks British Report" rightly declared that the Manchester ship canal, which had made a seaport of the city, was "one of the greatest enterprises ever undertaken." The scheme, first broached in 1848 not only met with opposition from the great seaport of Liverpool, but with ridicule from members of parliament who could not bring themselves to see the possibility of bringing the sea to Manchester, regarding the scheme as chimerical as the taking of Manchester to the sea would have been.

It took years to overcome the opposition of the exporters of Liverpool and the ridicule of the opposition, but the demands of the trade and commerce, backed by the pluck and the perservance of the merchants and the cotton spinners of Manchester overcome both and, as Derricks report states:

"Today in or near what a year ago were stately park lands, there are capacious docks and basins for ocean going craft. Huge warehouses, grain elevators, electrical and other works are rising adjacent to the marsh land. * * * The ship canal is a superb example of audacity. Nature made Manchester an inland town. Its natural outlet to the world and the supply of the staple on which it lives—cotton—was the great port of Liverpool at the mouth of the Mersey. But Manchester was not content to pay tribute to Liverpool and the Irwell was ploughed into a deep and broad channel which has turned Manchester into a seaport and enables steamers of ten thousand tons to sail quietly past the port of Liverpool and discharge upon the wharves of Salford and of Manchester."

While the work was magnificent, and while the profit to Manchester neither diminished the business nor the profits of Liverpool—for increased avenues of transportation mean increased general business—the great Manhester ship canal, opened only a few years ago, is now found to be of a depth inadequate to fulfill the expectations formed of its capacity. As in the United States the volume of freight offerings has far outstripped the carrying capacity of the railways, so did the volume of freight offerings at Salford and at Manchester outstrip the capacity of the great canal and in 1905 the work of deepening it to a uniform depth of 28 feet was begun. According to a recent report of Consul Church, at Manchester, the work has just been completed and now—as Consul Church says—"Any steamer afloat can now come up to Manchester—35 miles from the sea—with safety and expedition."

The enterprise of the British government in the construction of the canal was most commendable. The cost of the work was as nothing in comparison with the benefits resulting. But waterway improvement is a matter of importance and profit so vast to the trade, industrial and agricultural demands, that it requires a definite plan in the first instance, accompanied with annual appropriations for the work—as part of the settled policy of the government—with the work continuous until completed. Such is the plan urged by the National Rivers and Harbors congress, avoiding mistakes in plans, involving the most careful consideration not alone of present but of future volume of trade and commerce and extending its benefits to all sections and to all classes of trade and commerce by its comprehensiveness.

How to Get Strong.

P. J. Daly, of 1247 W. Congress St., Chicago, tells of a way to become strong: He says: "My mother, who is old and was very feeble, is deriving so much benefit from Electric Bitters, that I feel it's my duty to tell those who need a tonic and strengthening medicine about it. In my mother's case a marked gain in flesh has resulted, insomnia has been overcome, and she is steadily growing stronger." Electric Bitters quickly remedy stomach, liver and kidney complaints. Sold under guarantee at J. C. Perry's drug store. 50c.

There is an oft quoted legend that God is to blame for poor crops and the Republican party is the cause of good crops. This quotation isn't politics, it's truth, something quite different.

DeWitt's Kidney and Bladder Pills are for weak back, backache, rheumatic pains, inflammation of the bladder and all other annoyances due to weak kidneys. They are sold by all druggists.

Feeding hogs high-priced corn in the mud will give less farmers' dollars for Secretary Wilson to pile up, admire, throw down, pile up and admire some more. It shouldn't be did.

Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup does not constipate like most of the old fashioned cough cures, but on the other hand it gently moves the bowels and at the same time heals irritation and allays inflammation of the throat. Sold by all druggists.

LIVED IN YAMHILL THIRTY-FIVE YEARS

McMinnville, Or., Oct. 5.—Mrs. Anna Ross, wife of Duncan Ross, died at her home, four miles east of this place last Thursday, of heart trouble. The funeral was held at the home Saturday, interment being made in Brookside cemetery, Dayton. Mrs. Ross was born in Scotland in 1853, and emigrated to Canada with her relatives at an early age, where she was married. Mr. and Mrs. Ross removed from Canada to Oregon, coming to Yamhill county about 35 years ago, and settling in their splendid farm home 31 years ago, where they have since resided continuously. Deceased leaves a husband, one son and seven daughters.
