PRESBYTERIAN SYNOD CLOSSES AT MEDFORD

The Presbyterian synod of Oregon finished its sessions Saturday morning at Medford, after having had a pleasant and profitable gathering and by resolution voted their thanks to the Ashland Presbyterians and people who have entertained them.

A strong resolution was passed by the synod upon the subject of evangelistic work and the duty of ministers of the church making Sunday evening services an evangelistic one.

The synod listened with interest to Rev. T. J. Conner, a full blood Nez Perce Indian, who told in simple language of the wonderful revival among the Indians of Pendleton presbytery.

In considering the report on Sunday observance, the synod went on record in opposition to Sunday-breaking and in favor of workingmen who labor on Sunday being given a day of rest during the week.

The report on ministerial relief was read by Rev. W. H. Foulkes in the absence of Dr. McLean, chairman, showing $226,214 that was contributed for the work of this board, an increase of $8000 over last year.

TO SEA IN

HOUSE BOAT

Yachtsmen who have sailed the world over in quest of recreation and health are deeply interested in the house boat trip from New York city to Florida of Edward Becket, treasurer of the Equitable Engineering company of New York.

Although the boat draws little more than three feet of water, Mr. Becket says there will be no danger when it leaves the inland route in Virginia and rides on the Atlantic around Cape Hatteras and thence along the coast to Florida in tow of an ocean going tug.

Up to the time of the recent purchase of the Najme from the heirs of George C. Taylor, the eccentric millionaire of Islip, N. Y., considerable mystery surrounded the boat, says the New York World.

Yachtsmen who have seen the Najme, have expressed themselves as amazed by its luxurious fittings. Her graceful lines, trim masts and burnished brasses suggest at first glance that the craft is a yacht.

The boat is a yacht. Closer inspection, however, reveals her to be a house boat without power. She is 98 feet on the water line and has a 30-foot beam.

The Najme is far more spacious than many a summer villa. The interior woodwork, even to the galley, is of mahogany.

Forward on the boat are the kitchen or galley, two staterooms, one for the chef and the other for the maids, and quarters for the crew, which consists of four men and a cabin boy.

Mr. Becket purchased the 25-foot mahogany launch, the Syra, with the Najme as a tender. The launch will tow the house boat down the Raritan canal, through the Delaware river and into Chesapeake bay, where a tug will take up the journey around Cape Hatteras to Miami, Fla.

of its kind operated by a storage battery, of 110,000 candlepower.

George C. Taylor built the Najme several years ago from plans drawn by himself. The Najme's lines were first staked off with ropes on the lawn of the millionaire's Long Island estate.

When the boat was finished Mr. Taylor found he could not get it to the bay to launch. He had a canal dug from the lawn to the inlet, a distance of half a mile, and in this manner floated the boat.

Mr. Becket has refitted the boat in the most luxurious manner compatible with good taste.

This ailment is usually caused by rheumatism of the muscles of the small of the back, and is quickly cured by applying Chamberlain's Liniment two or three times a day and massaging the parts at each application.

SOCIAL WORK AND SOCIALISM

No doubt some of our radical friends—Socialists, single taxers or monopoly regulators—may be disposed to resent the pretensions of social work to take a rival place among the social program.

Poverty, congestion, child labor, overwork, preventable disease and accidents, alcoholism, professional crime, antiquated educational system, exploitation of the poor in retail trade, in rents, in the condition of labor and by the profits of stimulated vice—all these are obnoxious and pauperizing features of an imperfect environment which society can change by conscious social effort.

Other radicals may think of these things habitually merely as illustrations or symptoms of a bad system.

Education is not a negative process, although many of its problems may be stated in negative terms.

Religion is not a negative force in spite of the reality of sin and repentance and judgment.

Social work has to do with health, efficiency, education, recreation and justice. Its subject matter is human character and the social environment.

Its reliance is upon the capacity of the unhampered and emancipated individual to attain a spontaneous and normal development, and upon the enormous, as yet unrealized, advantages of social contact and cooperation.
