GOOD WORK BY YOUNG FARMERS

All that is needed by young people in the Willamette valley is pluck and ginger. These qualities have been displayed by Ernest and John Savage, two well-known Salem lads, who have rented the John Kirk ranch near Jefferson. One leaving his employment with the House Furnishing company and the other his as shipping agent for the Salem brewery, they decided to turn farmer and are making a decided success.

Though it is but a few months since they first started work on the farm, they are doing a fine business with their 26 cows and are realizing quite a neat profit from their cream, alone. They have also decided hog-raising is a good line and are not selling their milk, but raising some right fine porkers, which can be counted upon in the future to take some blue ribbons at fairs. New improvements are not lacking on the Kirk farm since the Savage boys have taken a hold. The latest separator is used. The crop next year from vegetables and fruit will surprise some of the old-time residents of the valley because of the energy and initiative being spent by both lads. They say farm work agrees with them and "Ernie" emphatically states no more brewery or town work for him, that there is too much good land to be cultivated to allow of that.
