Cannot Find Body —

After searching for eight days for the body of Walter Thomas who was drowned in the Willamette river a short distance below here, the crew on the government boat Mathaloma are forced to abandon the hunt. The body of the unfortunate man has probably drifted into one of the several deep holes at the base of the rapids or floated a great distance, as the searchers went over the river bed carefully from the point of the accident to Kaisers rapids four miles below. Walter Thomas' home was in Dayton, Or., where he had many friends. He was an unmarried man.

ALBANY APPLE EXHIBIT

SECOND WEEK OF NOVEMBER

The entries are coming in merrily for the Albany Apple fair, which opens in Albany on Tuesday, November 10th and continues Wednesday and Thursday, thus giving three entire days and evenings to this grand products. Growers throughout this and neighboring counties are saving their best specimens for the Albany contest, and a slendid list of exhibits is assured, not only from Linn county, but from half a dozen other counties.

All fruit entered for prizes must be correctly labeled and must be in the hands of the committee by 5 o'clock p. m. of the opening day. Applications for space may be addressed to Owen Beam, secretary of the apple fair commitee, Albany, Oregon.

Prospective visitors should bear in mind the need of making reservations at once in order to insure good locations. Space will be assigned in the order that applications are received. The committee requests that applications be made at once in order that they may know how much floor space to arrange for.

The management of the Albany Apple fair is in receipt of many inquiries as to the cost of space for exhibits. On behalf of the management it is desired expressly to state that no charge is made either for entry in any of the contests or for space. There will be no admission fee charged visitors to the Albany Apple fair.

A splendid list of premiums have been prepared, consisting of silver cups, silver knives and forks, and other valuable articles for the best displays of various varieties, and in addition there are special prizes for best displays of chrysanthemums, house plants and for the best general floral display.

Especial interest attaches to the Albany Apple fair this year and the exhibition will have an attendance vastly greater than that of any other previous exhibition, because on the second day of the apple fair, Wednesday, November 11, it is planned to open and dedicate the new Albany depot of the Southern Pacific company, which has been in process of erection for some months, with appropriate ceremonies and a grand demonstration in celebration of the event. Special trains will be run from all the surrounding country. In honor of this event special excursion rates will be in effect from all points. The business men of Portland will visit Albany in a body, and at the conclusion of the ceremonies of the dedication, the visiting bodies will be escorted to the apple fair. Elaborate preparations are being made by the Albany Commercial club to entertain the visiting thousands from Portland and other points.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC ELECTRIC

TAKING PLACE OF STEAM

Despite the financial stringency which has retarded the launching of new enterprises throughout the country during the last eight months railroad extensions and construction work in California has been making notable progress. The growth along these lines has been simply the natural result of the development of the interior, and is in itself productive of the very development that brings it about.

One of the largest improvements contemplated, and on which construction work has already been started is at the very threshold of San Francisco. The Southern Pacific company is electricizing its suburban system connecting San Francisco with Alameda, one of the suburbs on the east shore of the bay. An expenditure of more than two million dollars will be involved in making the change, which is expected to be completed within a year. The cars have been selected and the material ordered, sites for power houses purchased, and contracts let for the machinery. This is said by the company to be but the first step in a general scheme of improvements of great magnitude looking toward not only a comprehensive bettering of the enormous suburban transit service, but a segration of the suburban and through traffic which will greatly facilitate the latter.

Having reached Oakland, the terminal on the east shore of San Francisco bay, the Western Pacific railway is rapidly approaching completion, and before the end of the year trains will be running between the terminal at Oakland and Berry Creek in Butte county, a distance of 128 miles. When the road is completed and it is expected to be finished in a year, it will give California another trans-continental railroad.

The Ocean Shore road is operating trains to a point 28 miles south of San Francisco. From its southern terminal Santa Cruz, trains are running north 18 miles. When finished the road will furnish another connection between San Francisco and Sant aCruz, a distance of 68 miles, and will follow the shore line skirting the Pacific ocean.

Reports received by the California Promotion committee from many parts of the state indicate steady progress in extension work by many of the railroad systems connecting adjacent points. In addition to the work that is actually being performed plans have been materialized for several large projects which will mean much to the prosperity of the state. Every part of the state is getting the benefit of this active development work, from Modoc and Lassen counties in the northeastern corner of the state, where an extension is being made that will connect that district with eastern Oregon, to San Diego in the extreme south, through which, in the not distant future, another trans-continental railroad will reach tide water.

What all this means to the California farmer, aside from other considerations, in the marketing of his products, which in 1907 were valued at 213,000,000 is obvious. It means a quicker, cheaper, safer and more systematic shipment of products to market, and, as a corollary, the building up of large markets. It means too an enormous increase in the opportunities for intensive farming, diversified production all the year round which soil conditions in California will permit on fifty million acres.
