THE INTERESTS OF SALEM AND ALBANY ARE IDENTICAL

The occasion of the great valley apple show at Albany this month gives an opportunity to say some things on the above line. We are firmly convinced that the interests of these two cities are mutual. Both are on the main line of the Southern Pacific railroad, and both are interested in the extension through this valley of the Oregon Electric system. The fine new passenger station at Albany will probably be duplicated with a similar structure at this city, although Albany had probably the greater need for it, being at the junction of the Corvallis & Eastern line, also a Harriman property. Albany is naturally located, as is Salem, to become a railroad center, a crossing place for the north and south and the east and west lines that will eventually gridiron the valley. Both Albany and Salem are great shipping centers and are bound to have considerable manufacturing, as the raw materials of the forest and mines is bound to be worked up at these places on the river, and the fruit and dairy products are sure to be worked up at these cities. Both cities have a great interest in fruit shows and dairy conventions.

The location of these cities is very favorable from every point of view. While they have many common interests to develop, they are far enough apart to not in any way compete, and the most friendly co-operation and the most cordial good will should prevail between them. Their citizens should invariably speak well of each other, and of the respective towns. Their commercial bodies should boost for each other, as they are not rivals in any sense of the word. Both have enough strong points to make the race for a live, successful community, and not intrench on each other in the least. Both cities are interested in the improvement of the Willamette river. Both will be immensely benefitted by free locks and canal. Both are interested in the filling up of the Willamette valley with people, and hence both cities are carrying on liberal advertising campaigns in the promotion publications of the country. The success of the apple fair that is being held in Albany is close to the heart of the people of Salem. The apple industry means millions of dollars in wealth added to the value of lands in this valley and Salem should be one of the largest exhibitors at the Albany apple show.

The people of Albany and Linn county did the handsome thing by Salem when we held our cherry fair. The Linn county exhibit last July was by far the largest of any outside county. They showed splendid enthusiasm on that occasion in coming to our cherry fair, and in making that exhibit in the enemy's country, as Salem has allotted to herself the title of the Cherry City of the world. Whether we can hold that title remains to be seen, but it was certainly very generous of Albany to come down with so large an exhibit and help swell our displays and attract the attention of the whole state to Salem as the Cherry center of the universe. We ought to go up to Albany in the same generous spirit, and the feeling that when we are boosting for them as the Apple center we are doing an act of justice that is due Albany for favors already performed. It is in that spirit that large men and large towns are built up, and the time has come to show ourselves capable of such things in the Willamette valley. We are doing great things in cherries, apples, walnuts, prunes, and can afford to be "in the large" a little bit toward a neighboring city that has treated us as handsomely as Albany has done, and will do again when there is a suitable occasion.

The Chambers of Commerce of the two cities are to be congratulated on the plans of co-operation so far adopted. They could be properly urged to act in unison still further, for the reason stated in this article, that we have so many common interests that what helps one city will surely help the other. If the homeseeker cannot be located at Salem, let us say a good word for Albany. If an industry can find no place to rest its cornerstone in the Capital City, let us send it to Albany. And if the same thing happens at Albany we may feel sure that they will reciprocate, because they have shown that disposition already. In place of saying of each other that we are this or that let us always say good things of each other, and there will come only good from it. The time has come to boost the whole valley, and we cannot do that by knocking even Eola. There is a railroad being graded through Eola, once the hopeful seat of empire for the Oregon country. There is hope for the dullest and the deadest place on the booster railway, and it is time for all of us to get on the line of constant promotion and progressive policies.

THE CORRUPT PRACTICES ACT

One of the measures passed by the people of the state of Oregon is at the present time being made the butt of considerable fun and ridicule by politicians and shallow thinking persons. This measure is the Corrupt Practices Act. While there are many apparently trivial sections in this law, they all are necessary and cover their particular phase. For instance, the portion of the measure which provides that no nominee shall buy another person a cigar or a drink sounds rather useless by itself. But the law must be considered, not as to its effect on the individual, but that upon the whole campaign. For instance, at elections in some of the larger cities of the country, outside of Oregon, it is no uncommon thing to find at a political meeting a keg of beer, free to those who wish to partake. Sometimes cigars, tobacco and even candy is passed out to prospective voters. All of this tends to divert the voter's attention from the aspirant's qualifications as an executive, and resolves matters down to the drunken, maudlin expression: "Oh, he ish a good feller, let us vote for him." In this way nearly every provision of the Corrupt Practices Act could be examined and found, while apparently technical, necessary for a clean, honest and anti-boss campaign.

The corrupt practices act is a mill stone in the evolution of the ideal commonwealth. The so-called practical politicians, who are not always so practical after all, will ridicule the law and seek to bring it into contempt, and defeat its operation, just as they attack all laws made for the betterment of society. But the law will stand all such attacks and come out triumphantly vindicated by the people. The machine politician would never enact such a law, and the people know that. So they enact them without his consent, and he foolishly denounces and condemns the law made to curb and check his abuses, just as if the people could knowingly travel on the same line as the professional politician. So let us have our smokes and our drinks apart from our politics. Treating is bad enough without having it applied to political situations, and that is just what the corrupt practices act is aimed at—the divorce of mistaken liberality from public affairs.
