

MISSING EDNA CLARK WROTE OF HER GREAT LOVE FOR PREACHER

(United Press Leased Wire.)
San Francisco, Nov. 12.—Documentary evidence tending to support the accusations of Edna Reynolds of Oakland, that the Rev. Paysou Young, rector of Episcopal church of St. Mary the Virgin, bore more than priestly relations with Edna Clark, the missing 19-year-old Alameda art student, is in the hands of the ecclesiastical court of inquiry today.

As from the grave, comes the written confessions of love by the missing girl to her friend and confidant. A letter written by Edna Clark, dated October 21, telling of her meeting with her priestly sweetheart and of her love for him, is corroborated by the Rev. W. B. Clark of Redwood City, whom she mentions as having met with her "sweetheart" the day before. Dr. Clark said that he was introduced to Edna Clark by Father Young in the rector's study on the day mentioned.

The letter brought forward by Edna Reynolds, in which Miss Clark tells of her love for Father Young reads in part:

"Dearest Ted:—Mamma asked me yesterday afternoon if I were particularly happy. 'Oh, yes,' I answered. 'It's true, too, for I saw a particular friend of mine yesterday noon and have hopes of seeing him on the boat this evening. Haven't I reason to be happy. Yesterday was the first time in eight days that I saw him, and I was becoming so blue that I hardly had a smile for any one. I am undoubtedly madly in love with him. And say, who do you think was with him?"

"No one we know, but another priest called Father Clark. He looked rather astonished and amused when he heard my name. I don't blame him, do you? He isn't half as nice as my beloved, though—or at least I don't think so."

"I wish you could meet—some day, Teddie."

"Dark curly hair, long nose, blue eyes, typical priest mouth—on the order of an Irishman's—so I told him once—rather tall and slender. That's as good a description as I can give of him. Don't think he's handsome, for while he's fairly good looking he would never be styled a beauty."

"He said that some time he wanted me to join the order called 'The Confraternity of The Blessed Sacrament.' I told him I would when our engagement was announced and I could attend his church."

"The idea of your insinuating the other day that there would not be much confessing of sins when I was there, and that it would be mostly confession of love! How shocking!"

In closing, Edna Clark wrote:

"Did I tell you I expect to see my sweetheart on the boat today? You'll excuse my saying so much about him won't you? One always writes about what is most in one's mind, you know."

The pen picture the missing girl has given is vivid in its resemblance to Father Young. The features correspond with the description.

HARRIMAN AND HILL FIGHT FOR CONTROL OF PACIFIC COAST

(United Press Leased Wire.)
San Francisco, Nov. 12.—Financiers here say that E. H. Harriman and James J. Hill, the two greatest railroad magnates in the world are preparing to lock horns in a battle for the control of transportation in the west and on the Pacific coast.

Followers of railroad construction say today that the battle beginning in the northwest will be fought out all along the coast into San Francisco and is caused by the various acquisitions of valuable rights of way that have been made by parties interested in one or the other of the two roads during the past few months.

It is pointed out that the activity of Hill in the Portland-Spokane-Seattle road, and the various electric feeders to his road in the northwest is to forestall any development by Harriman that may take away from the Hill roads the valuable traffic of that section of the country.

Harriman has been strengthening himself in Oregon and California by electrifying his lines and by building new ones but Hill is expected to show his hand soon when the new road from San Francisco to Oregon via Tiburon is opened.

BUSHEY INVITES INVESTIGATION

In an interview with County Judge Bushey relative to the acceptance and approval of the surveyor's report of road district No. 27 1/2 by the taxpayers of that district, and various resolutions adopted at a called meeting the forepart of the week, he said he was unable to gain a clear understanding of the resolutions.

"The real nature of the report, as was published in the papers, is beyond my understanding," said Judge Bushey. "They first resolve to report favorably upon the supervisor's management of the work, of which a full report was tendered during the meeting by the supervisor. I seems to be an unusual proceeding for a district to hold a called meeting and accept a report from the supervisor, as the law covering these matters in the county, requires the respective supervisors to hand in their report of road work to the county court, and it is very seldom that the supervisor reports to a district meeting moreover when the meeting is a called one."

"After the supervisor's report was adopted at this meeting, a resolution followed saying the taxpayers would like to know where the work was done and the cost of the same. Notwithstanding the supervisor's report should have contained all this information, the taxpayers of road district No. 27 1/2 are perfectly welcome to make a thorough examination of the books and records here in the court house which are always open to themselves where the road work was done and the cost of same."

"The amount of cost which was reported favorably upon by the meeting considerably differs from those in the records, but the taxpayers could have had definite information by examining the county records. However, any time they should see fit to go over this matter at the court house, I would be pleased to assist them in doing so, and also take up other questions regarding road conditions, especially the cost of construction."

GIBSON WILL DRAW "BURLY WESTERNERS"

(United Press Leased Wire.)
New York, Nov. 12.—Charles Dana Gibson is on his way to Seattle today to begin a series of pen and ink sketches of "burly westerners" which will appear in the magazines.

This new work follows Gibson's failure to make a success of his work in oil painting, which he undertook when he bade a fond farewell to the proud girl in black and white, who bears his name, and set off for the Latin quarter of Paris more than a year ago.

But the camel's hair brush and the canvas failed to produce anything in colors that could claim the distinction of the graceful black lines of the Gibson girl.

It is rumored about the publishing houses that the heart of the Gibson girl has been captured at last; that she has met her fate in the person of a broad-shouldered, deep chested "man from Puget Sound" and that Gibson is going out to investigate the affair.

The Range Indestructible

Why You Should Buy

THE MALLEABLE RANGE
MADE IN SOUTH BEND

Because It Is

The Peer of the Range World

It costs more to build it, and a very little more to buy it, but the extra money is well invested, as it secures a range that will outlast two to one any other range on the market, and saves money every day it is in use, because it consumes less fuel in addition to giving better service. Its advent into the kitchen means economy and the best service.

"The Malleable" made at South Bend weighs more in the same size than any other range on the market, but there is a reason for every extra pound of iron and steel used in its construction. It means strength where strength is needed, long life, superior cooking service and saving of dollars in fuel.

FIND RIDDLED AUTO AND BLOODY WEAPONS ON BELFORD FARM

(United Press Leased Wire.)
Marengo, Ill., Nov. 12.—A three-thousand-dollar automobile with the tonneau pierced by bullets, also three butcher knives, a revolver, ax and several sticks of wood stained with blood were found today by searchers on the John Belford farm near here.

Following the finding of the body of Oscar Hoganson, a neighbor of Belford's by the dead man's daughter, Arvilla, search was begun today by a force of workmen under the direction of City Marshal Tyler.

In the meantime, M. Belford was arrested near Ellis, Neb.

Two women and one man are under surveillance here by the police as they have been seen to frequently visit the Belford farm and some of their belongings have been found on the premises.

Among the neighbors of Belford who have disappeared are James O'Leary and James O'Brien, whose bodies may be found on the farm.

Hot Fight in Federation.
(United Press Leased Wire.)
Denver, Nov. 12.—After quarreling all morning, the delegates to the convention of the American Federation of Labor, here reached no decision in the contest between the two factions of the Electrical Workers' Union seeking seats as delegates to the convention. The report of the special committee appointed to investigate the case was taken up immediately after the convention resumed its deliberations this morning and the war of words was very bitter. The electrical workers' union is one of the strongest in the federation, and the convention is awaiting the decision anxiously.

While the convention is quarreling over the seating of delegates from the Electrical Workers' Union, another fight, even more bitter, has disrupted the delegates. This is the fight between the opposing factions in the United Mine Workers of America. An effort is being made to induce John Mitchell to again become a candidate for election to the presidency of the Mine Workers' union to succeed President Lewis.

The Lewis faction is bitterly opposed to Mitchell because he is one of the vice-presidents of the federation as well as an officer in the district union of the mine workers in Indiana and Ohio.

The visit of the delegates to the Printers' home at Colorado Springs yesterday will probably result in the establishment of similar homes for the aged and disabled members of other unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The delegates to the convention from other unions were impressed with the work being done at Colorado Springs.

For the first time in many years, a convention of the American Federation of Labor will transact its business without having a fight between the socialists among the delegates of that party. The socialists delegates to the convention and this announcement today.

They have discussed the political attitude of the federation as expressed during the recent presidential campaign and by the representatives of the legislative committee and have arrived at the conclusion that the socialists have won a victory because of the action of the federation in going into politics. They declare that this movement will eventually bring the laboring men of the country into their political stand. Each time the delegates have opposed them by declaring that the American Federation of Labor is a labor organization and not a political organization. The decision of the federation to enter politics to the extent of supporting its friends and advocating the overthrow of its enemies hailed by the socialists with satisfaction.
