SENSATIONAL STORY ABOUT FAURE DEATH

(United Press Leased Wire.)

Paris, Dec. 1.—Madame Steinhilf, charged with the double murder of her husband and Mme. Japy, and suspected of complicity in the death of former President Felix Faure, was today taken from the prison of St. Lazar to the palace of justice where her examination was begun by Magistrate Andre. She seemed more rational today than she has been for some time. It has been considered best to detain her at the palace of justice until her examination is over.

Although Magistrate Andre refused to say what occurred during the examination of the woman, it was rumored about the court corridors today that evidence had come to light that Mme. Steinhilf's hair was caught in the death grip of President Faure and that the doctor's who were summoned at the time of his death, worked for hours in an effort to loosen his fingers rather than cut the woman's hair.

This sensational story started a new scandal, this time involving the physicians who attended Faure at the time of the tragedy. It was denied today that the woman lost her hair shortly after the president's death, as has been reported.

L'intransigent today published an interview, alleged to have been given by Mme. Steinhilf shortly before her arrest. In this she says that she published her statements when she did because she felt her reason giving away, and because she wanted the force of the police department called in solving the mystery of the double murder, of which she and others had been accused.

The body of Adolph E. Steinhilf was reinterred in L'Hay cemetery today, the authorities having retained the viscera, with which to make chemical examination, in order to ascertain if poison had been administered by his murderer.

Hot Springs, Va., Dec. 1.—It was reported here today that President-elect Taft had decided to drop his contemplated fight against Representative Cannon for the speakership. The Republican party leaders are much gratified that Taft will not make the fight against "Uncle Joe."

W. J. BIGGY

Discussed Drowning.

Chief of Police Biggy, before embarking on his fateful trip, discussed the drowning of five boys on the bay, and commented upon the strange fate that their bodies were never recovered. This was brought to light by the police commission, which today questioned Patrolman C. L. Martien, who, with the exception of Biggy's boon companion, Commissioner Kell, and Engineer Murphy, of the police launch, was the last man to see the chief alive.

Martien was in charge of the police boat last night while Murphy was at supper. Biggy came down to the boat at 7 o'clock, and asked for Murphy. He would not permit Martien to call the engineer, but offered the patrolman a cigar, with the suggestion that they both return to the seclusion of the cabin to escape observation while they smoked.

It was there that the chief referred to the strange disappearance of five boys who left a boat house in a small skiff, and were never heard of again. Biggy expressed surprise at the fact that their bodies had never been recovered.

As soon as Murphy returned Martien declared that the chief remarked that should newspaper men hear of his trip to Belvedere to seek Commissioner Kell they would comment on it, in view of the existing state of affairs in the department, and requested Martien not to talk.

The report that Kell had intimated that Mayor Taylor had asked for the resignation of Chief Biggy, in view of the charges pending against him, and that Biggy had sought the aid of Kell to protect him from dismissal, was denied this afternoon by Mayor Taylor.

The mayor said that he had had no communication with Biggy in reference to the charges, although he knew that such charges were being prepared for presentation to the police commission.

Furthermore, Mayor Taylor declared that he paid little attention to the statements of Commissioner Kell at the meeting of the commission at 5 o'clock this morning, when Kell told of the last interview between Biggy and himself. Mayor Taylor would not say whether Kell was withholding any part of his conversation with Biggy from the public.

The secretary of the California state board of health says that oysters and clams spread fevers, especially when they are taken from that state's rivers and bays.
