MARTIN TROUBLES AGAIN IN COURT

The non-support suit of S. S. Martin was argued in the county court today by Attorneys P. J. D'Arcy, for Mrs. Martin, Walter Winslow for the state, and Wm. Kaiser for the defendant, S. S. Martin.

The developments in the old matrimonial disagreement at this trial are practically the same as those brought forth in the former divorce case instigated by the two dissatisfied parties. Martin took the stand and was presented with two letters, which he admitted writing, but said three had been several alterations inserted, which were not there heretofore. Martin seemed somewhat agitated, and, after listening to a short argument made by Attorney D'Arcy, Martin made the remark that he thought D'Arcy thought more his (Martin's) wife than he did, which brought smiles of amusement to the small crowd of witnesses and spectators. Attorney Kaiser interfered at this juncture, however, preventing any further argument on that subject.

When Mrs. Martin took the witness stand to testify, she told of how Martin complained and "growled" about her extravagance in conducting her household duties, and that how, after she had asked him if he was crazy, when he answered a question asked by her on some household subject, he said she was the insane person, and he was going to have her examined and sent to the asylum. Mrs. Martin also told of her trip to Southern Oregon, and how she returned on a written request of Martin to find the house locked to her, compelling her to seek the roof of neighbors for the time being, and work for her living. These statements, combined with various other allegations of non-support on part of Martin put an end to the testimony.

Attorney Kaiser, in his argument, made a motion that the case be dismissed on the grounds that Mrs. Martin was not entitled to come in court and procure support after she had made statements to the effect she would not and could not continue to live with Martin, and that she did not desire to do so.

Attorneys Winslow and D'Arcy also put up arguments against those of Mrs. Martin and Judge Bushey took the matter under advisement for further consideration.

CHEMIST NECESSARY TO IDENTIFY

(United Press Leased Wire.) Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 4.—Following the novel defense of Raymond, accused of the murder of the city chemist, it was stated that the city chemist is making a study of the disputed article which is the subject of the case. Buchanan, who is advised to use of opium, warned the city that they had better watch him that he did not obtain the drug. Later it was discovered that Raymond had given the chemist sacks of tobacco in which were concealed small brown cubes of a thing, believed to be opium. A young woman was arrested on being given a hearing, and that the supposed opium was more than strawberry jam. As none of the proceedings were able to swear that the statement was false, it was decided for the case to the city chemist.
