Southern Pacific Spent $1,600,000 Controlling Colorado River and Saving Imperial Valley. Work Done At Request of President Roosevelt, but Congress Takes No Action Towards Paying the Bill.

(United Press Lined Wire.) Washington, Dec. 30.—Will the Southern Pacific Company get $1,600,000 from the treasury of the United States government in return for the money expended in closing the break in the runaway Colorado river in the latter part of 1906 and the beginning of 1907? This is a question that is causing considerable worry today to Maxwell Everts, counsel for the Southern Pacific Company and Senator Flint of California, author of a senate bill allowing such an amount to the railroad.

Senator Flint and Attorney Everts paid a special visit to the White House just before congress adjourned for the holiday recess and endeavored to induce the president to send a special message to congress asking that the Southern Pacific Co. be re-imposed for controlling the river, but it is understood the president refused to do any more in the matter.

The claim of the Southern Pacific Company in the case is a peculiar one in that, it involves a personal obligation assumed by President Roosevelt, the question of the relations existing between the California Development Company that made the original cut in the Colorado river through which the river ran away and the Southern Pacific Company and the relations that exist between the California Development Company and its subsidiary Mexican company and the United States government and the government of Mexico. Harriman is afraid that the various complications of the claim may be the cause of its dragging on in the usual course of claims against the United States government, and that it will either be denied or will drag on through congress for 20 years before it is considered.

When the river got beyond control of the California Development Company and the government of California and the residents of Imperial Valley appealed to President Roosevelt to stop the break, Roosevelt asked Harriman to do it. Harriman and the President had some telegraphic correspondence, and the order was given from New York that the river should be controlled by the Southern Pacific. Roosevelt's telegram to Harriman said:

"I can recommend legislation which will provide against a repetition of the disaster and make provision for the equitable distribution of the burden."

The Southern Pacific attorneys say that this means that the President promised to reimburse the Southern Pacific Company, but the President's message to congress on the subject does not state so, and hence the worry.

TALKS ABOUT BALDWIN'S APPLE HAS ONLY ONE FAULT

Ed. Journal: Your editorial on Baldwin is good, only I would move to amend by saying "plant Baldwins if you know your land and locality will grow them to perfection." All you say about this splendid apple is true, when grown without blemish, but it is a fact well known that in many localities this apple is susceptible to a speck rot that renders it entirely worthless. It will not do to charge this to lack of enthusiasm.
