RIP VAN WINKLE WILL AWAKEN AT OPERA HOUSE TOMORROW NIGHT

The announcement that Thomas Jefferson is to be seen at The Grand Opera House January 14, in "Rip Van Winkle," will recall to mind the excellent impression made by this actor in the same delightful character on previous visits to the city.

There is nothing even in the classic Shakespearian realms that has appealed so steadily and so strongly to the theater-going public as has this story of the drunken vagabond of the Catskills. In tragedy, genteel comedy, farce, burlesque or comic opera there has been no production that ever could hold a candle to the wonderful record which "Rip Van Winkle" has enjoyed. And more remarkable still it is positive that the play will endure for many years to come, in Thomas Jefferson's conception. Its perennial popularity is due entirely to the exquisite art, delicate feeling and irresistible humor with which the Jeffersons have delineated the jovial old vagabond hero. There is heart in every line the artist speaks, and there is tenderness and love and all the sweetest and gentlest qualities of humanity in the delightful old toper's make-up. It is a character such as no actor can give except a Jefferson, for they have lived and breathed the very atmosphere of the character all their lives. Thomas Jefferson pours his own heart and soul and all the genial attractions of his own nature into the part and so mixes and moulds them with his glorious gilding art that the results call for all the admiration and affection which an audience is capable of giving. It is a marvelous resurrection from Washington Irving's pages of the hero of the village of Falling Water, a masterpiece of Histrionism as splendid and perfect in its way as the best that any of the old masters ever put on canvas. It is as popular with the public today as it was four decades ago and those theater-goers count themselves lucky who are able to renew their acquaintance with it every few seasons. Seats on sale at box office Thursday, January 14.

FORAKER TAKES A FLING AT TEDDY

Washington, D. C. Jan. 13.—Senator Joseph B. Foraker, whose term of office ends when Roosevelt retires from the Presidency, arose for one of his final attacks upon the man in the White House whom he considers his particular enemy and who to a great extent is believed to be responsible for the threatened extinction of Foraker as a public figure.

His subject was the Brownville case on which have been based the main features of his warfare with Roosevelt. He characterized the efforts of Herbert J. Browne and William G. Baldwin, official detectives who investigated the Brownville affair, as "iniquitous and unholy work."

He denounced as "atrocious lies," their report that they secured confessions from a dozen discharged soldiers and contended that the detectives were employed in violation of the law. He said the payment of $15,000 to them was invalid.

Foraker bitterly arraigned the action taken by the President in the investigation and produced letters from several of the discharged soldiers in which they said that they had been approached by detectives who "fabricated the stories of confessions."

A Cure for Misery.

"I have found a cure for the misery malaria poison produces," says R. M. James, of Louellen, S. C., "It's called Electric Bitters, and comes in 50 cent bottles. It breaks up a case of chills or a bilious attack in almost no time; and it puts yellow laundice clean out of commission." This great tonic medicine and blood purifier gives quick relief in all stomach, liver and kidney complaints and the misery of lame back. Sold under guarantee at J. C. Perry's drug store.
