THE SENATORS DALLIED ALL DAY LONG CHILDED THE RAG OVER BABY HOMES AND TRIMMED THE WHISKERS OF THE STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY—HANDLED THE HOUSE RESOLUTIONS

The Senate today spent the day in a session that was characterized by a dallying with the resolutions of the House, a childing of the rag over baby homes, and a trimming of the whiskers of the State Historical Society. The session was a long one, and the senators were busy all day long.

The first item of business was the resolution of the House regarding the baby homes. The senators spent a great deal of time discussing this resolution, and it was not until late in the day that they were able to reach a decision.

The second item of business was the resolution of the House regarding the State Historical Society. The senators spent a great deal of time discussing this resolution, and it was not until late in the day that they were able to reach a decision.

The third item of business was the resolution of the House regarding the State Historical Society. The senators spent a great deal of time discussing this resolution, and it was not until late in the day that they were able to reach a decision.
