Service and Safety

Two elements of bank work stand out above all others—service and safety. When we come to consider corporations and the oppression they are said to work on the individual, we discover that the bank is distinctive—a thing apart. In no possible way can it corner the market. For even the money it holds and loans out belongs to the people and must be produced on demand. It may influence supply and demand through the granting of credit, but it is itself influenced by supply and demand, and moreover by its own credit issues. It is peculiarly a servant. Not only is it the servant of all the people, but of the individual—your servant. Not only is it a peculiar corporation, but it serves all other corporations. In serving the individual, the ways are so numerous that we can briefly characterize them as a needs and wants of men who trade.

Safety applies to everything connected with this bank. It has physical equipment which is safe. Its dealings with depositors demand safe methods. It makes safe loans. Its whole make-up as an organism, with well proportioned parts, is safe. And it not only strives to serve but strives to be safe.

These two elements are what have attracted our splendid list of customers. This bank has succeeded on its merits. It has succeeded through helpfulness alone. It offers to you the same service and safety it is giving to others. Will you give us the opportunity to "show" you?

PLEASED WITH OREGON AND APPRECIATES THE VAST BUSINESS OPENINGS

J. C. Lumley, a representative in an executive capacity of the International Harvester Co., who has been quietly sojourning in this city for several days, was interviewed last evening by a Journal reporter, and had considerable to say concerning Oregon and Salem. His views, while those of a stranger, are also the views of a trained observer, and for once we are able "to see ourselves as others see us."

Asked concerning his impressions of Salem, Mr. Lumley said: "You have a very pretty and growing city here. That, of course, I presume you have heard before," he said with a smile, "but I really mean it."

"Most state capitals are given over to a sort of dry rot—it seems to be their universal fate. Here, however, it seems to me that the richness of the surrounding country and the marvelous rapidity with which the large holdings are being cut up that growth is being forced upon Salem, whether she will or not. The city is at about the right distance from Portland to be the legitimate center of a large agricultural community, and I wish to say right here that permanent prosperity and solidity can have no better resource."

"Liberality on the part of local merchants who do not have to pay the expense of a Portland establishment, should offset the difference in gross sales, and it should be easy for them to keep their trade in Salem, always given they maintain a liberal policy and up-to-date wares. Your prosperous farmer is much more of a connoisseur than he is credited with being."

"I observe a healthy tendency to improve the thoroughfares of the city, and upon the advantage of this and the extension and maintenance of country roads too much stress can not be laid. It is those roads and a network of suburban car lines that bring the country traffic to the city which is its center and distributing point."

"The foresight that laid out the beautiful expanse of lawns about your public buildings is an example of good judgment too seldom met. That one feature will, in time, make Salem noted among coast cities. An acquaintance tells me that they used to grow hay on these plazas for the fire department horses. The hay may have been useful, but the delight to the strange eye that lies in those lawns will advertise you as miles of prosaic pictures and printing could not."

"I see also a disposition to make the most of the remarkable natural means of beautification of the city. Where there is such a wealth of indigenous flora it is the part of wisdom to employ it. Too many northern cities strive for tropical effects, and the result is only a painful imitation. Your system is best and should be pushed to its limit. Well kept, tidy and beautiful grounds are a delight and a source of legitimate and honest pride."

"What about Oregon? "This is a marvelous state—it does not realize its own richness and wealth. It is almost unharassed by insect pests or destructive storms; it needs little in the way of irrigation for the most part; its soil is non-irrigated, and its future is as bright as any section of similar area of which I know."

"Our business, of course, is principally east of the mountains, but we do considerable on this side, and we consider it a growing one. It is for the purpose of judging its immediate growth that I have been traveling slowly up the coast by easy stages for some weeks. I am pleased with Oregon."

Mr. Lumley left this morning for Portland, from whence he journeys to Spokane.

BASEBALL BATS FROM THE PLATE

Several good intentioned citizens made honest predictions that baseball would be a game of the past shortly. From the appearance of the 9000 fans who attended the first game in Portland, baseball is gradually becoming the only game.

Truck Egan, the man who formerly played with Oakland, and who was in the habit of massacring the ball, has not brought the fans to their rest this season.

George Keeton threw his arm out when the Fairmount lads played Jefferson last Sunday, and was compelled to turn the ball over to Daue. Shows some good honest work on Keeton's part, and Daue kept the box in repute for the balance of the game.

Frank Durbin has congratulated Heyser and Jerman on their success in getting together a first-class team of ball players. Frank ought to know, he put the first and only aggregation of winners on a Salem diamond, and played the season out.

"Chasey" Carey was in the game with the same lengthy pair of legs Sunday. The first time up he swatted the ball for a two-bagger.

If Mista Johnson, the prize fighter, can hit as hard as Masta Johnson, Portland's baseball player, Jim Jeffries had better use a little caution, or a baseball bat.

If those U. of O. ball players would like to try another game in this city, Heyser and Jerman would be glad to accommodate them. They would sure tackle something their equal, if not their size.

The Salem high school team is somewhat out of the running. Guess they ran too fast last year.

The latest thing in coives is the "pretzel twister." Just what this just what this new fangled shoot will do, has not been figured out as yet, but, according to reports from those who have seen it, a batter has a fit after trying to hit it.

HORSES MADE ASSES OF THEMSELVES

A team of horses hitched to the running gears of a wagon got frightened at a passing car yesterday evening and raced up State street. The driver, who was sitting on the reach, fell off and his two frightened animals took the bits in their teeth and were bent upon stringing the rig all over the country, and they would probably have succeeded had not a long freight train passed up the road about the time they arrived at the intersection of State and Twelfth streets, causing them to shy into a tree. The wouldbe wagon smashers were apparently satisfied after running into the tree, as they meandered over the nursery lawn, and began to crop grass. The driver escaped injury, but his dander was considerably riled on account of the action of two undignified horses.

BALLOON MAKES GOOD FLIGHT

[United Press Leased Wire.] North Adams, Ma., April 29.—After five hours' flight, a balloon in which A. Holland Forbes and Clifford Hamon ascended here early today, landed at Waterbury, Conn., according to messages received in North Adams.

The aeronauts maintained an altitude of 5000 feet throughout the flight.

that outdoor exercise is needed by the American people. That's all very well, but how can people with rheumatism follow that advice? The answer is simple—use Ballard's Snow Liniment and the rheumatism will go; leaving you as spry as a coit. Gives quick and permanent relief from rheumatism, neuralgia, lame back and all pains.

Cannon taking up golf shows that smoking big black cigars, and failing to recognize congressmen on the floor of the house does not give him sufficient exercise.

The Circus

acrobat finds it necessary at all times to keep his muscles and joints supple. That is the reason that hundreds of them keep a bottle of Ballard's Snow Liniment always on hand. A sure cure for rheumatism, cuts, sprains, sore throat, lame back, contracted muscles, corns, bunions and all points. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by all dealers.

Speaker Cannon is going in for golf. Maybe he wants a Carnegie medal before he retires—that is, of course, providing he ever does.
