THINKS COLLEGES SHOULD UNITE

(Pendleton East Oregonian) President Homan of Willamette university, who delivered two sermons at the Methodist church yesterday and addressed the students of the high school this morning, is thoroughly in accord with the proposition to unite the colleges of the Willamette valley. The proposal was made recently and is being urged by the Portland papers, as the result of the announcement that the trustees of the Rockefeller fund would not give to any of the schools in the Willamette valley, because the number of schools was too great for the small area of contributory territory.

As Willamette university has the most strategic location of any in the valley, as well as being the oldest institution of learning west of the Rocky mountains, President Homan naturally thinks that it should be one of two to be retained. He thinks the other one should be Pacific university at Forest Grove. With the colleges at Albany, Philomath, Newberg, Dallas and McMinnville, either united with one of these two or with some other college of their own denomination in some other field, President Homan thinks no difficulty would be encountered in securing from the east all the funds necessary to make two really important and influential religious educational institutions in Oregon.

President Homan believes there is and always will be a field for a religious educational institution in the state as in every other. He also thinks that past experience in the east has shown that one or two strong religious or denominational colleges in the state would do much toward building up the state institutions and would bring to pass a state of affairs where there would be no Oregon students attending institutions in other states and where large numbers would be coming here to go to school.

While no move toward that end has yet been taken, Dr. Homan believes it is entirely probable that a conference of college presidents or boards of trustees, may be held in the not distant future and that the subject of union will then be taken up for discussion. What the outcome of such a meeting would be is hard to foretell.

So far as Willamette university is individually concerned, Dr. Homan thinks the chances are bright, regardless of what action is taken in the matter of union. The number of students is constantly increasing, while the endowment is also receiving substantial additions. Eaton hall, the new $50,000 building which is a gift to the institution from Robert Eaton of La Grande, is rapidly being rushed to completion and is nearly ready for the roof. This building is of pressed brick, of modern architecture and will be one of the handsomest of any educational institution in the state when completed. It is planned to have a big celebration in Salem in August or September. At the time it is proposed to dedicate the new building, celebrate the 65th anniversary of the founding of the institution and have a big home-coming of alumni and former students of Old Willamette.

MINES ON GOLD CREEK.

Among them one party consisting of J. E. Murphy, Chas. Savage and Norris Hoyt, Steng McLean, Hansen and one or two others.

Mr. Murphy, whose athletic instincts will hardly let him sleep of nights when he gets in the mountains, made a thorough examination of the mines. He tramped over the claims, went through every tunnel, took samples, and in fact made the closest personal examination of the mines of any man visiting them, outside of the management. He is enthusiastic over the outlook, and like everyone else who has ever visited the mines, is simply delighted with the prospects. Like everybody else, he says: "Just wait until you see the smelter returns, and watch the rush."

RUSSELL CATLIN IN EASTERN OREGON

Manager Priehs of the Salem Auto Garage received the following letter from Russell Catlin, who is driving a Maxwell car in Eastern Oregon. Mr. Catlin just purchased the car from Mr. Priehs:

"Mr. J. F. Priehs, Salem, Or. "Dear Sir—The car is working beautifully so far. The first 21 miles out of Shaniko we ran in one hour and 40 minutes, where we staid all night with Mr. Bolter.

"From Bolter's to Madras, 23 miles, we took two hours, and from Madras to Redmond, 30 miles, we were just two hours and 30 minutes. Here we got dinner, having run the 53 miles in four hours and a half.

"From Redmond to Bend, 20 miles we were two hours and 15 minutes, as the roads are quite sandy, but for the full 94 miles in eight hours and 20 minutes we were well satisfied. Very truly,

SOME PROPOSED IMPROVEMENTS AT OLD WILLAMETTE

The title to the Willamette Hotel property has finally been closed up, and the deal for its sale consummated. This being done, a committee has been appointed to draft articles of incorporation, etc., and the individual stockholders have one and all endorsed the idea of paving Ferry street for the block from Commercial to Liberty. This, with the understanding that the property owners on Liberty street pave to connect with State street. At the same time it is the intention to fill Liberty across to Trade street. Mr. Fred Steusloff is chairman of the committee, and he says: "We are just waiting to see what the other people are going to do. If the new hotel project materializes, which I hope it will, we will manage our property to suit the circumstances. If it does not materialize, it is probable we will take the grand old building in hand, modernize it, and give Salem what it most surely needs, an "up-to-date" hotel. Still, we cannot act, or take any immediate steps, until we know what other Salem people want to, or will do. Salem needs a hotel. If other people provide it, well and good, if not we will."

Just Watch Cooper— D. J. Cooper, one of the best-known of the hustlers of The Dalles, a wide-awake fruit grower in Salem today, and, while he is stilling foxily, he is asking the price of fruit lands. Where Cooper looks in, it is well for others to jump in, for he always looks before he leaps, and when you see him looking it is only a question of where he is going to light.
