FIFTEEN INJURED IN WRECK TRAIN TUMBLES INTO ROWE RIVER NEAR COTTAGE GROVE

There was a bad wreck on the Oregon and Southeastern railroad five miles from Cottage Grove Saturday afternoon. The train consisted of several flatcars loaded with lumber and a passenger coach. The accident was caused by the giving way of the bridge and trestle across Rowe river, and the cars plunged down 100 feet. The engineer applied the brakes on the engine and held it, the cars wrenching loose from it. It seems miraculous that no one was killed. Engineer Osterman was struck in the breast by a lever as he set the brakes and was badly hurt but will recover. The others seriously injured were F. A. Hall, lumber buyer, leg broken; W. B. Foster, timber buyer, leg broken; Price Rogers, leg broken; L. Grancy, hip smashed, probably the worst injured of all. Several others were badly cut and bruised.

Survivors of the wreck were able to talk of their experiences today. Perhaps the most remarkable of these is the story of Fireman John Coater, who owes his life to the use of a heavy iron poker as a sort of a parachute. He said: "I had just picked up the iron poker to adjust the fire when the engine and tender were separated. I followed the tender down and the poker caught twice on timbers as I was going down and eased me down until I struck the water. I swam around a large timber and ran for the nearest telephone for help. It was all done so quickly we could scarcely realize what happened."

Earl Garroute, the 13-year-old boy who saved Claude Kime, the 8-year-old son of Dr. A. W. Kime, said: "Mother was screaming for me at the top of her voice. I said, 'Here I am, mamma, I am all right.' "Then I saw Claude's hands sticking out of the water. He had gone down once and I grabbed him as he was going down again and pulled him out. I got there just in time to save him."

F. H. Hall, a lumber dealer, said: "We went down so quickly we could scarcely realize what happened. I managed to rise on my right leg and then saw Judge Foster completely submerged under the water. I reached down, grabbed him by the collar and pulled him out, as he was hemmed under a seat with a broken thigh. 'Blow your breath through your nose, judge,' I said. He said, 'We are gone.' 'No, we are not; look up and see the light.' 'Assistance arrived presently and we were helped out.' They are both old men and lie in bed and crack jokes at each other like two school boys."

The railroad commission visited the scene of the wreck yesterday but have not yet filed any report as to who is to blame. The trestle was in poor shape, being partly rotten.

"urgent" was adopted instead of immediate. Under some decisions of the state, emergency sections of certain acts have been held good and valid, when they did not show in express terms that an emergency existed, but simply recited facts showing the emergency existing. In the case of McWhirter vs. Brainard, 5 Oregon, 426; Briggs vs. McBride, 17 Oregon 640, and Kadderly vs. Portland, 44 Oregon, 119, all show opinions substantiating an emergency clause wherein the word "immediate" is omitted, and other clauses showing an emergency to exist. The above cases will be referred to during the argument tomorrow.

BASS HORN DITCHED THE SMELL WAGON

When the Woodmen's parade was marching through Silverton's streets Saturday, a Salem man in a big outfit got mixed up with the band, and came out second best. The big machine came poking its nose into the music, making the boys dodge, but Andrew Andregg, who was forcing a goodly portion of Silverton's ozone through a big bass horn, just stood his ground, and as the auto collided with the horn, he blew out a couple of notes the auto couldn't cash. They smashed the headlight, and put a crimp in the breathing apparatus that hushed its voice for awhile. In the meantime Andrew Andregg kept pumping a ten-inch stream of atmosphere through the horn, and never missed a note. A bass horn, with a big-lunged German at the business end of it, is too much for even a boss-of-the-road smell wagon.

LANDS FIRST HINDU IN STATE PRISON

Sheriff Christman and Deputy District Attorney Wilson, of The Dalles, arrived in the city today, landing the first Hindu ever committed to the state penitentiary, for passing forged checks. It would break several hunches to print the unpronounceable Oriental sleek-sar's name. It runs around in a circle like his turban, and ends nowhere. He walked up the streets of Wasco's capital and raked in about $900 before he was arrested.

BILL ANDERSON AFTER STREET CLEANING JOB

Bill Anderson took pity on the hard-working street-cleaner the other day, and shoved his big wheel scraper for half an hour while that gentleman went in and stowed away a glass of beer and a cold lunch. Bill himself is out of a job, and is going to ask the mayor to put him on the force as a short time substitute. He is to get no wages and pay for the beer for the other fellows on hot days.

PIONEER OREGONIAN HAS PASSED ONWARD

Joseph H. Howell, an Oregon pioneer and long-time resident of this city, died at his home in Yew Park today after an extended confinement in bed from a complication of troubles. He was about 78 years old and was from 1837 to 1899 janitor at the state house, where Mr. and Mrs. Howell served meals to many of the prominent people of the state. Several governors, state officials and members of the supreme court were entertained by them. Mr. Howell was a man of fine social disposition, worked hard and was a good neighbor in every sense of the word. He had an only son who died about a year ago. His wife survives him. Funeral announcement will be made later.

After all, one political boss, while not so beautiful, has much more power and pull than a parade full of "Rose Queens."

PERSONAL MENTION

Mrs. F. O. Bartholomey and children, Lyle and Gladys, left Saturday for Medford, Minn., where they will remain for several months.
Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Newell, of Portland, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. C. T. McIntire, in South Salem.
Mrs. J. E. Baker and daughters, Misses Maebelle and Lylah, leave tomorrow for Portland to attend the Rose Festival.
Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Junk, of Berkeley, Cal., arrived here last week. Mr. Junk has returned to California, but Mrs. Junk will remain here during the summer with her mother, Mrs. George Peebles.
Mr. and Mrs. David W. Eyre left today for Portland, where they will remain during the week, taking in the rose carnival. After their return Mrs. Eyre will go to the coast to spend the summer.
Mrs. T. Mapletorp left for Portland this morning, where she will visit her daughter, Miss Emma, and friends during the Rose Show.
Mrs. H. H. Olinger will be the guest of Mrs. Lynn H. Briggs during the Rose Carnival in Portland.

ARKANSAS TRAVELER WHO HAS RETURNED

Will George, who established the White House restaurant in this city, has been visiting his people in Arkansas with his family for a year past, has returned to his first love. He is in Salem, and talks as if he might stay. Whatever his decision, he will be welcome while he stays.
