COUNCIL PUSHING BUSINESS

Grinds Out a Big Grist and Then Adjourns to Next Monday Night.

Petition of J. A. Bernardi, et al., for sewer through alley of block No. 2, to committee on sewers. Alderman Moffitt asked for a concrete alley crossing, but Mr. Stolz explained that there were several such to be built, and they could be done cheaper later in the fall, and the matter was referred to the street committee.

Page Gets a Few More. Manager Page got about everything he asked for at the hands of the city council last night. An amended franchise abandons 35 feet of track on the eastern end of the fair grounds road, and the track will enter the Southern Pacific station on a curve off the line before reaching the fair grounds. The track on Ferry street to the old car barn back of the Willamette hotel is given up, but a new track is acquired down Chemeketa street to the gas plant, with additional rights on State and Front streets. Resolution for Hunter drop guard tender adopted.

After a Poor Woman. A resolution was brought in to compel Mrs. Gesner to put down a concrete walk on South Cottage street. One alderman called attention to cases where bankers, former city attorneys and an ex-minister of the gospel were not complying with the orders of the city council and being done. It was unfair to jump onto one poor woman, and let guilty persons, who were able to comply with the orders of the city, escape. On a vote being taken the champion of the poor woman against the powerful and wealthy property owners was the only "No."

After the Feed Barns. In reporting favorably on the petition of George Bayne for the construction of a feed barn on South Commercial street, just off the end of the big bridge, Alderman Stolz roasted the feed barns for obstructing the streets. Sometimes, he said, they blocked up both sides of the street, and when the city was full of teams they came very near being a nuisance. But the people in the block where the Bayne barn was to be built seemed to want that sort of a thing, and it was granted.

East Salem Department. Alderman Low reported the installation of the East Salem fire station. The electric lights and telephones were being put in, and the hosemen were ready to respond. He recommended Peter Graber for driver and Henry Wolf for engineer of the chemical at $90 per month. He also got through a resolution giving the regularly salaried police and firemen a two-weeks' vacation at the expense of the city, to be taken at their convenience, and without impairing the efficiency of the public service. Low gets about what he asks for, and is supreme in his field of the fire and water committee.

Some Minor Matters. The street committee reported adversely on the claim of Mrs. McNiel.

Sidewalks were ordered on Mission street from Twelfth to Commercial, city attorney to serve notices.

Petition for sewer in Boise's addition to the city of Salem granted.

The public buildings committee was given another week to find quarters for the city treasurer in the city hall.

Mr. Elliott submitted plans for the extension of the Ferry and Court street sewers and were ordered built. City engineer reported Hazel avenue contract completed, and 80 per cent ordered paid.

Ordinance adopted for opening Pine street through the land of J. L. Freeland.

Claim of Alice B. Gray for $100 damages from being thrown from a buggy at unlighted ditch, to street committee.

Presnal ordinance, forbidding leaving street cars on street crossings more than five minutes, sent to bondyard.

LICENSE COMMITTEE GETS JOLT

The license committee, composed of Presnal, Hill and Eldridge (Eldridge absent) reported adversely on granting any license at the Old Bill Anderson stand at 157 Commercial street. E. J. Daly and Wm. J. Toland were applicants, and it is understood another application.

Mr. Presnal said, on the information of the city attorney, he was compelled to reject this, as the city census taken by the government showed that Salem had now one saloon to the thousand population, and could not grant any more licenses.

On motion of Mr. Greenbaum the matter was taken out of the hands of the license committee and referred to the park committee. Hofer, Stolz and Eldridge, to report next Monday night.

Application of Wm. J. Davis for license at the Nushaun stand, went over a week, at a request of Mr. Presnal.

OSTERMAN SAYS ADAMS TO BLAME

Annapolis, Md., July 20.—Under cross-examination today Lieutenant Robert E. Adams stuck to his story that Lieutenant James N. Sutton, the officer of the marine corps whose death on October 12, 1907, is being investigated by a court of inquiry, committed suicide.

Questioned about a purported interview with Mrs. Rose Sutton-Parker, sister of the dead lieutenant, Adams flushed deeply. Attorney Davis questioned him carefully regarding this interview, and the witness denied most of the statements attributed to him. At the conclusion of this portion of the cross-examination, Second Lieutenant Osterman was called to the stand.

Osterman told his story of the fight which preceded the death of young Stanton, and it differed in several ways from the version given by Adams. He told the story of the automobile ride from Carvel hall to the naval academy barracks in Sutton's machine. Adams stopped the machine and wanted to fight Sutton, who was not willing, according to Osterman's story.

After he and Adams left the barracks, the witness said, he left Adams and went into camp. Hearing the sounds of shots he ran towards the scene of trouble.

When he arrived at the place where Sutton, Adams and Roelker were, he said he saw Roelker lying on one side of the road and Sutton lying on the other side. Adams and another man were standing over Sutton. He explained that some one said: "Sutton shot Roelker, and then shot himself." Then Osterman helped to take Roelker to the hospital. Osterman said Sutton was unpopular with the officers at the academy, but denied ever hearing him threaten to kill Adams.

While denying that he made admissions to Mrs. Parker involving himself in the tragedy, Lieutenant Adams became very much excited. His denials were vehement, and he was flushed a deep red.

Attorney Davis, representing Mrs. Sutton and Mrs. Parker, held a mem-

Grandmum of the alleged interview, and fired questions at Adams with merciless rapidity. Adams showed discomfort for the first time since he went on the stand.

Adams said he had not told anything to Mrs. Parker, except that he would go into the records of the case.

"What is the use of all these little details, when I told you I made no admissions at all," vehemently queried the lieutenant.

When Adams said that when Mrs. Parker came to Annapolis on the detective mission, following her brother's death he was warned to be on his guard, as she looked like the Shrewd woman, everybody laughed.

For the first time since the hearing began a smile crept over the faces of Mrs. Sutton and her daughter.

Adams said that when Mrs. Parker, at the time of their interview, asked him to tell the truth about everything, he referred her to the records of the case.

"Did you not tell Mrs. Parker that you were so infuriated you did not know what you were doing, and did not care, and that some one had to pull you off his (Sutton's) prostrate form, and that you were beating him and had your hand on his throat?" asked Davis.

Adams replied that he did not remember.

Henry E. Davis, counsel for Sutton's mother, shot questions at Adams with great rapidity, but the lieutenant, who witnessed his classmate's death remained firm in his recitation that it was a case of suicide.

"Will you say that Lieutenant Sutton committed suicide," asked Davis.

"The shot entered his head," replied Davis. "I simply saw him move his head and body as he lay on the ground, raise his arm, and then saw the flash of the revolver shot. I couldn't see the bullet, but I have said in so many words that he killed himself."
