CHURCHES TO CONTROL THE EARTH

Layman's Missionary Society of this Section of the Controlling More than a Billion Dollars.

EVANGELIZE EARTH

WILL CONTROL MONEY ENOUGH THAT THEY CAN CONTROL EVERYTHING GOING ON IN THE WORLD AND BECOME THE WORLD'S DICTATORS.

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.] Washington, Oct. 11.—A highly centralized organization of the Protestant churches of America, controlling property worth more than a billion dollars, is the object of a movement that will be started by the Layman's Missionary Society, according to plans made public today. The object of the colossal trust, as great as any ever conceived by the brains of the world's greatest financiers, is the evangelization of the earth. Every church in Washington will send delegates to a convention that will be held November 11 to 14 for the purpose of awakening the residents of the capital to the necessity of concerted action in missionary work. Similar meetings will be held in the great cities of the country.

while on May 3 to 6 a national missionary congress will convene in Chicago. At all of these meetings this great inter-denomination plan will be discussed. It was stated today that President Taft would make the opening address at the Washington convention. Chief Forester Gifford Pinchot is chairman of the general Washington committee having the matter in charge.

MEXICANS HAVE ROW IN LOS ANGELES

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.] Los Angeles, Oct. 11.—Following a demonstration, which almost ended in a riot on a public square known as The Plaza, Juan Miranda, an alleged anti-Diaz agitator is in the city jail with a bullet wound in his heel. E. Landeros, Miranda's companion, is also in prison, having been booked on suspicion. The arrest of the two Mexicans occurred late last evening, after a squad of police detectives had broken up a street meeting that being addressed by Mexicans, who are dissatisfied with the present administration in their native land. L. G. Delava and B. Bartolomei, who addressed the meeting, were arrested by officers headed by Detectives Palamantes and Rico. A mob of 300 persons followed the officers from the plaza and was dispersed with difficulty. Later in the evening, when Rico returned to the plaza, he is alleged to have been assaulted by Miranda, who was arrested with a wicked looking knife. After a sharp struggle with the officers Miranda fled. When he failed to heed Rico's command to halt, the officer fired, a bullet striking the man in the heel. Miranda and Landeros, who was with him, were arrested. A second mob then formed, and swarmed into the hallways at police headquarters. They were dispersed by a squad of central station reserves.

MEYERS IS NOW IN JAIL VOLUNTARILY

Weary and Heartsick He Yields to Persuasions of Minister, Who Feeds Him, and Gives Up.

TIRED OF IT ALL

THROWS HIS GUN AWAY AND VOLUNTARILY COMES INTO SALEM TO PAY WHATEVER PENALTY IS DUE TO HIS MOST FOOLISH ACTS.

George Meyers, the young man who shot and killed Police Officer Tom Eckhart, has given himself up to the authorities, after having experienced nearly eight days of terrible suspense and misery, attempting to elude the officers and the watchful public, and he is now locked up in the county jail awaiting to be arraigned and answer for his crime tomorrow morning. The story of the unfortunate affair is short and simple, as far as the public in general is aware. Geo. Meyers was arrested while in the room occupied by himself and his brother, Arthur, on October 1, 1909, at the request of Arthur. Police Officer Thomas Eckhart took the young man in charge and was on the point of opening the door to the city marshal's office when George shot him twice, and from that until last Saturday night about 11 o'clock the entire populace of the valley has been awaiting anxiously for the outcome, which came in a manner surprising and yet most fortunate for everyone concerned. For the past two days George Meyers has realized more peace of mind and body than he ever thought possible during his wild race through the country ahead and under cover from the watchful eyes of his pursuers.

Meyers' Flight. Immediately after Meyers fired the shot that killed Eckhart, he realized what it meant to him, and fled north in a state of tense excitement and nerve-wrecking fear. The frightened boy did not stop running until he reached a point a few blocks below the Bonham place, and in a high bush hedge he kept in hiding for the remainder of the morning, all day Friday and Friday evening he did not move, so benumbed with cold, and his mind in an indescribable condition of fear and anxiety. He finally came out on the road leading to Silver Creek falls, and, after traveling a few miles east, Meyers called at the home of Peter Luthy and ate breakfast, after which he tramped and rode on until he reached Victor Point, from which place he branched off and went through Sublimity. Before reaching Sublimity, Meyers succeeded in getting permission from a farmer, who was a stranger to him, to ride, and in broad daylight, the fugitive rode on a lumber wagon directly through Sublimity. Before going into Sublimity, however, Meyers met and talked with one of the rural mail carriers for a time. The mail carrier noticed Meyers' apparent fatigue, and told him he would let him (Meyers) ride but for the strict rules of the government prohibiting such things. After riding a few miles past Sublimity, Meyers left the wagon and went to Marion, a small place on the Southern Pacific road. Here he caught a passing freight train and went as far as Albany, but was afraid to go farther. After spending a short time in Albany, fearing every moment, that some one would recognize him, the now tired boy took another freight train and came back to Marion, undecided as to where he was heading for. George then went to the Looney ranch near Jefferson, but, changing his mind, he returned toward the east, and crossed the Jefferson-Salem road five miles south of here, where he met Marion Looney and talked with him a short time. After leaving the Jefferson road Meyers is unable to state just where or how he became headed for Pratum, near which place he was apprehended by Rev. P. L. Larden.

The Surrender. After the long and tedious trip was completed as far as the Pudding river bridge, about three miles from Pratum, George entered the gate and onto the road over which he went to the Larden home, back in the timber, and met Rev. Larden, the man who, after a persistent and heart to heart talk with the now completely exhausted boy, per-

CHINAMAN LIKED AMERICAN SPIRITS

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.] Washington, Oct. 11.—Dr. Wu Ting Fang, the Chinese minister to the United States, today expressed himself as much satisfied with his experiences last night, when he attended a meeting at the Temple League of Spiritualists. From the moment Wu entered the structure where the seance was held he was all attention.

One of the half dozen mediums present startled him slightly by informing him that some of the spirits were hovering around him.

After the meeting had come to a close, Wu closely questioned the mediums regarding the mysteries of the spirit land, and listened attentively to a recitation of the spiritualistic doctrines by one of the leaders.

HETCH HETCHY WLIL BE A GREAT RESERVOIR

[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.] San Francisco, Oct. 11.—Secretary of the Interior Richard A. Ballinger left San Francisco today for Yosemite, where he will inspect the Hetch Hetchy and Lake Eleanor projects, from which it is proposed that San Francisco draw her water, supply for a municipal water system.

Before leaving Ballinger declared that the city rights in the Sierras would be kept strictly within the letter of the law, under the terms of the grant from Secretary Garfield, but that nothing "unreasonable or arbitrary" is to be expected.

Under the terms of the federal grant the city will have to develop the Lake Eleanor project to its fullest capacity, and prove that it is inadequate to supply the needs of San Francisco before the work can be started on the Hetch Hetchy project.

Mayor Taylor had a long conversation with the secretary regarding the proposed projects, and afterward expressed himself as satisfied that Ballinger's position need not cause the slightest apprehension.
