A STATE HIGHWAY POLICY.

Candidates for Governor might as well begin to think about a state highway policy.

The people are thinking about it.

They wonder why this state cannot do something for state highways.

For instance, the federal government has been expending $75,000 a year building magnificent highways in Rainier National Park.

Oregon has been getting a pittance like $7,000 for Crater Lake National Park.

When the state tries to do something to build a state highway to make Crater Lake accessible the injunction fiend bobs up to stop it.

Between the dead ones who still encumber the earth and the kickers who should not encumber the earth we are making slow progress.

This state should adopt the policy of building one first-class state highway through each county.

It might cost $10,000 a mile, but it would be a good investment.

Such a highway with a forty-foot macadamized roadway would be traveled day and night.

Thousands of the most prosperous business men of the state and the tourist travel of the whole world would be passing over it.

It would not be long before such roads could be electric lighted.

Residences and beautiful country homes would spring up along such roads, and land on such roads would become worth $200 to $500 an acre.

Such a road would be an object lesson for the people to demand good county roads.

One good macadamized state road through each county would stimulate the whole county to build better roads as feeders to the main road.

Nothing would do so much to develop the country, bring in people and stimulate property values as these state highways.

The Capital Journal proposes that we enter upon a state campaign for state highways.

SALE MMAN MAKING GOOD.

James Lambreth, formerly of Salem, is general manager of the Willamette Valley Light and Power company and superintendent of the Portland, Eugene & Eastern Railway company.

He is a man who is making good in a practical way and is getting results for his employers.

He keeps close to the men with the picks and shovels; close to the men who wear the climbers and do the wire work.

Mr. Lambreth is able to get results because he understands handling men, and he understands men because he has been a workingman himself.

He is superintending the installation of a 63,000 volts of electrical power to supply current as far as Albany and Coquille.

He has installed a new turbine power plant at Springfield and reconstructed the railway lines at Eugene.

Jim Lambreth seems to know his business.

MAKING PORTLAND MORE THAN BEAUTIFUL.

The system of pendant electric globe lights for illuminating the streets of Portland is making that city more than beautiful.

Portland is becoming more and more the most beautifully illuminated city on the Pacific coast.

The open life of the masses of people on the streets of a great city is ennobled and purified by brilliant lights.

Light and power are the two words most expressive of the age in which we live.

The electric cars and the motor cars on the brilliantly lighted streets of a modern city are the highest manifestation of these two words.

They carry thousands of men, women and children every hour along those wonderfully lighted streets of Portland.

More light means better health and more morality.

The new era of the greater and more beautiful Portland is due to the large use of the pendant globes on iron posts with clusters of white lights.

It shows the value of a city administration co-operating

Both Boys Saved.

Louis Boon, a leading merchant of Norway, Mich., writes: "Three bottles of Foley's Honey and Tar also cured my boy of a severe cough and a neighbor's boy, who was so ill with a cold that the doctors gave him up, was cured by taking Foley's Honey and Tar." Nothing else is as safe and certain in results. J. C. Perry.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If anybody is entitled to the $1,100 prize money offered by the authorities for the capture of Meyers, Mr. Larden certainly is entitled to that money. Because he employed persuasion instead of force is all the better reason why he should be paid. He is a poor man with a large family and the reward for the capture of Meyers will be made good use of by him.

The Gorton-Pew Fisheries company of Gloucester, Mass., put up in one-pound packages a very fine article of boneless Cape Cod codfish. The Capital Journal suggests that he ship out a case of it and let us distribute some of it to prospective candidates for the legislature and see if we cannot get better results out of the next Oregon assembly. We have just gone through the thick volume of so-called legislation produced by the last one and we are impressed with the great value in a change of diet that would introduce more brainfood for the average Oregon legislator.

This city should have a very expensive equipment of machinery to test electric current and analyze gas. It would save the Portland corporation a big bill of expense making the chemical analysis of the stuff.
