

VICTOR HERBERT IS WRITING GRAND OPERA

Victor Herbert, the eminent composer-conductor, who is at present engaged in writing for Oscar Hammerstein an American grand opera, "Natoma," in which Mary Garden will perform the chief roll, during the coming season, contributes a medley of selections from "Little Nemo" to the November Amberol (4-minute) Record list of the Edison phonograph. In addition to leading his famous orchestra for these records he is also acting in the capacity of supervising critic during the recording of the better class of musical records, other than his own. The November list of Amberol Records is unusually attractive, and offers a splendid variety for selection. Sousa's band renders his "Stars and Stripes Forever March" in characteristic style; Albert Spalding, the brilliant young vocalist, contributes a most artistic interpretation of Sarasate's "Gypsy Airs." A captivating violin and guitar arrangement of the "Carnival of Venice" is the offering of the famous Olivetti Troubadours. Edgar L. Davenport, America's foremost elocutionist, recites "Lasca" in faultless manner, and Will Oakland, the popular counter-tenor, of the Cohan & Harris minstrels, renders "Just Before the Battle, Mother," a descriptive war ballad, with pleasing effect. The remaining 14 numbers comprise band and orchestra selections, comic songs and sacred hymns, vaudeville and monologue—all by the well-known Edison artists.

The Standard (2-minute) list is also well balanced. Sousa's band is heard in "Powhatan's Daughter March," Cal Stewart describes Uncle Josh's visit to the opera; Olly Oakley, England's premier banjoist, displays marvelous skill in one of his own compositions, and Grace Cameron sings "Oh, Doctor," a funny coon shout that just now has vogue. Will Oakland, Manuel Romain, Ada Jones, Edward M. Favor, Byron G. Harlan and Ed. Meeker contribute popular selections, as does Arthur C. Clough, a recent valuable acquisition to the entertaining staff. The balance of the list is well rounded out with orchestra and band numbers, a quartette, two duets, a sacred selection and a clever vaudeville offering by Ada Jones and Len Spencer.

Stomach troubles would more quickly disappear if the idea of treating the cause rather than the effect would come into practice. A tiny, inside, hidden nerve, says Dr. Shoop, governs and gives strength to the stomach. A branch also goes to the heart, and done to the kidneys. When these "inside nerves" fail, then the organs must falter. Dr. Shoop's Restorative is directed specifically to these failing nerves. Within 48 hours after starting the Restorative treatment patients say they realize a gain. Sold by the Capital drug store.

REX BEACH'S GREAT TALE OF ALASKA

Nearly every city in the great

Northwest has a vital interest in the great events that transpired at Nome in 1900, when the stampede to the beach diggings took place, that any play or book treating of those events is almost personal. That is why "The Spoilers" will always be a welcome visitor to any city in this Western country.

When Rex Beach wrote the book he little thought that his story of the trials and tribulations of the hardy northern miners would bring him fame and fortune. The character of Glonster, part owner in the Midas mine, is a character true to life, a dogged, determined man, a diamond in the rough that is made over by the influence of a city girl, a girl of a different type than what he is used to. Every character represented in "The Spoilers" are true types of the men and women that are found in the Alaska gold fields.

Mr. McRae has gathered a most excellent company, which is headed by that charming young actress, Miss Margaret Oswald, the supporting company numbering 18 people. One of the big scenic features of the production is the third act, showing the exact reproduction of the famous "Northern" dance hall, as it existed in Nome in 1900.

The engagement of "The Spoilers" in this city is for Wednesday, October 27, at the Grand Opera House.
