

HUMAN HEARTS TONIGHT

Touching Portrayal of Peachful Life in Picturesque Askansas Hills.

So strong an impression did "Human Hearts" make upon a prominent clergyman in New York, that he wrote to the gentleman impersonating "Tom Logan," vigorously endorsing the play, and informing him of his intention of trotting all the orphans of a local asylum out to see it at his own expense. And he did it. "You cannot conceive," said Manager Nankeville, "of the appreciation of those youngsters at the change of sermon thus afforded them unless you had listened to that gallery the day they attended. With the 'gods' present," he continued, "as often as I have myself enjoyed sitting through it, it was as enjoyable as a box of monkeys sprinkled with tears. Quite often since, have city schools, whose principals were aware of the great merit in the play, given half a holiday, that the youngsters might enjoy a matinee. And what out-spoken critics the tots have been. You can't get a favorable criticism or a padded eulogy for love or money from a juvenile. You must give him the goods or he denounces you broadcast, and I am really grateful to the tots of America for their appreciation of what all now agree to be one of the best American plays."

"Human Hearts" comes to the Grand tonight. Seats on sale at 9 o'clock this morning.

Konotovich notified the foreman of a rock crusher Wednesday that he was going to leave, as his life was in danger. Shortly afterward two men arrived, and the Russian fled in terror from the place.

USES OF CHEMISTRY.

An article in La Nature, Paris, quoted in the Literary Digest, reminds us that it is scarcely a century since chemistry with its useful and orderly investigation and results succeeded the older alchemy, "hardly a fertile art." Some of the latest methods of observation are discussed as follows:

"When the chemist has substances as pure as possible; when the manufacturer has succeeded in preparing to good advantage the product that he wishes to sell, they must possess methods enabling the former to study the properties and reactions of bodies and the latter to control their fabrication and to perfect it.

"The first and most essential in analysis in the most general sense of the word. Chemical analysis enables us to affirm the presence or absence of certain elements and to measure their amount. Laboratory technique in this regard is the same as in Lavoisier's time, but with improvements.

"In the industries, where precision is of secondary importance and rapidity is most desirable, methods of analysis by color and volume have almost displaced those by weight. But chemical analysis can give information about the composition of bodies, and in many cases their other properties are much more interesting. This is why, before putting their products on the market, manufacturers subject them to tests similar to those that they are compelled to undergo in practice. Among these, for instance, are breaking tests by shock, compression and traction, and tests for hardness.

"As physics has developed, and has placed other tools than the balance at the disposal of the investigator, methods enabling us to examine the nature of phenomena more minutely have made great strides. Among all these, the one most frequently used nowadays is perhaps the microscope. Applied to transparent bodies cut into thin slices, it gives us exact information of the constitution of the most complex rocks and gives very minute information where chemical analysis would give only approximate compositions. If the subject to be examined is opaque, it may be polished sufficiently to reveal its structure. This branch of chemistry is metallography, which in these later years has been greatly extended and has not only advanced the study of the constitution of alloys, but has rendered still greater service to the metallurgical industries: it enables us to determine, by simple examination, the condition and previous thermic treatment of the iron products."

Was Case of Suicide.
[UNITED PRESS LEASED WIRE.]
Santa Fe, N. M., Nov. 27.—News was received here today that the body of Harry Johnson, the son of Oscar Johnson, president of the Roberts, Johnson & Rand Show Company, of St. Louis, Mo., was found in a remote part of the mountains near the Pecos river, 50 miles from here, late yesterday.

A bullet hole in the young man's forehead and a revolver lying nearby told the story of his death.

The general impression is that Johnson committed suicide, as it was known that he suffered from ill-health.

New Thanksgiving bird.
Scio ships, to Portland and other points, a large amount of poultry, embracing almost every variety known to man. But George Westinghouse has added a new variety in the shape of a large eagle. This somewhat rare bird in this section of the valley, was caught with a steel trap. He measured four feet from tip to tip of his wings. George brought the eagle to town Friday to be shipped to Portland. It is hardly presumable that the bird will be mistaken for a turkey and grace some Thanksgiving table. —Scio News.

SLICK FEMALE SWINDLER IS TO BE PROSECUTED

Hogium, Wash., Nov. 27.—Miss Fay Needles, who was arrested in Wenatchee yesterday on a charge of grand larceny, preferred by Superintendent of Schools N. D. McKillip, of Chehalis county, will return to Hogium for trial.

It is alleged that several months ago Miss Needles visited Chehalis county and secured a letter from Superintendent McKillip, which, it is said, she used to secure orders from school districts for books that she represented herself to be selling.

She also had a supply of blank school warrants which, it is alleged, she induced school directors to sign in many cases, and these she cashed. While a number of orders were received for books, none of them have been filled. It is said that more than $500 was secured in this manner.
